EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

NEW ORLEANS will have an exposition next year.

CRANKS will invade the White House even when the President is absent.

THE National party seem to have an affinity for Williamsport in which to hold their State convention.

THE English Parliament has adjourned, but the Pennsylvania Legislature still hangs on to the ten dollars a day.

THE contract for building the new cruisers for the United States navy have been signed by Secretary Chandler and Mr. Roach.

THE Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin and Philadelphia Inquirer say that a drought is prevailing. There are no signs of such a calamity near Bellefonte.

THE 3d of September coming will be the one-hundreth anniversary of the signing of the definite treaty of peace between this country and England, and the date of the opening of the institute fair in Boston.

A "NATIONAL Longevity Union" has been organized at Erie. A monthly fee is required of members, who receive medical treatment free and all are required to live temperately and follow as near as possible the advice of physicians.

THE banana has long been regarded as extremely nutritious. It is recommended above all others for invalids who are unable to swallow hardier food. An estimate by Humbolt claims that 44,000 pounds of bananas can be produced on the soil that would be required for 1,000 pounds of potatoes, and that the same area that would be required to raise wheat enough for one man would produce enough bananas to feed 25 men.

THE terrible accident at New York on Tuesday, August 28, by which an excursion steamboat was blown to pieces and an indefinite number of persons were killed or injured, shows the importance of keeping a close official watch over steamboat boilers. Yet the most careful and intelligent inspection is sometimes unavailing, and considering how many boilers are constantly in use, the number of explosions is not great, and speaks well for the way in which they are built and used.

THE Maryland Democrats are said to be hopelessly divided, and the Republicans down there are feeling pretty good over the prospect which they see stretched out before them. Their idea is that the two factions into which the Democrats have split will each put a ticket in the field. This is to divide the Democratic vote and give the Republicans a majority. It is an attractive programme, and we should be happy for the sake of the Maryland public, which is shamefully misgoverned under the existing regime, to see it carried out. But our Republican colleagues in Maryland had better not allow themselves to be unduly elated. Quarrelling Democrats have a way of sinking their differences and closing up the ranks when election day rolls round.

The Great Volcanic Eruption.

The New York Sun, in a recent editorial, gives some very entertaining facts regarding the great eruption on the island of Java. It calls attention to the fact that both the great earthquake in the island of Ischia, at the end of July, and the extraordinary and still more destructive volcanic eruption which has just overwhelmed the island of Java, occurred in a well recognized focus of volcanic forces. Ischia is only a few miles from Vesuvius, with which it is connected by a chain of small volcanoes, and in the same part of the Mediterranean Sea are Ætna, Stromboli, and other famous volcanoes. Java lies near the focus of the greatest volcanic system on the globe, amid a perfect nest of volcanoes, there being no less than 45 craters on the island of Java itself. The evidence given by these two outbursts, therefore, taken in connection with that recently published by similar, though less destructive, disturbances in other quarters of the earth, shows that there is at present extraordinary activity in the earth's interior, which is manifested at all, or nearly all, the vents by which these pent-up forces ordinarily escape. To show how widespread this internal disturbance is, it is only necessary to recall the fact that within six months there have been extraordinary volcanic eruptions or earthquakes in almost every quarter of the globe. In Japan a new volcano has been formed; in Central America an old volcano, supposed for centuries to be extinct, has suddenly burst into eruption; in South America Cotopaxi has melted the accumulated snow on its lofty cone, and begun to send forth fire and ashes; in Europe the giant Ætna has partly roused itself to activity, and since the disaster at Ischia, Vesuvius has been giving indications of an impending eruption. But in the intensity of action displayed none of these outbursts can compare with the great Javan eruption. Beginning with the volcano on the little island of Krakaton, near the northwestern end of Java, the eruption spread in the most wonderful manner, as if through the bowels of the earth, and presently fire began to burst forth from the huge Javan craters, one mountain after another responding as if to an invisible signal, until no less than fifteen volcanoes were shaking the earth with their thunder and overwhelming it with molten lava and showers of rocks, cinders, mud, and ashes, while for hundreds of miles around the air was darkened with volcanic dust and the sea was thrown into commotion by the trembling of its bed and the atmospheric disturbances. The great eruption of August, 1772, in which the volcanic mountain in Java called the Gunung Pependsjan was swallowed up, has been reckoned the most violent in historical times, but evidently it has been exceeded in violence and in the extent of its destruction by the present outburst. This time, too, according to the latest news from Java, a mountain has been swallowed up, the waters of the sea now covering the spot until recently occupied by the mountain of Krakatan.

One of the most significant features of this display of volcanic energy is the effect that was produced upon the sea and rivers. The waters of the latter were rolled back, overwhelming their banks, and tremendous waves were created in the sea, which, rushing upon the coasts of Java, swept away villages and cultivated fields. It is even said that the water in the Strait of Sunda rose twenty degrees in temperature during the eruption. It is probable that this increase of temperature was local and did not extend to all the waters of the strait. But it is evident that the great sea waves were created by the quaking of the earth, and this fact furnishes another and very striking proof of the intimate connection between volcanoes and earthquakes. The study of the various phenomena presented by the simultaneous eruption of so many volcanoes will doubtless furnish much fresh material for writers on the science of volcanology. The focus of the volcanic system to which the Javan craters belong is supposed to lie between the islands of Borneo and New Guinea, considerably to the east of Java, and from this focus four principal fissures in the earth's crust are supposed to extend, one reaching to Kamschatka, another to the Antarctic circle, a third running through the islands east of New Guinea, and the fourth extending lengthwise across Java. There seems to be no doubt that on the present occasion the volcanic forces began to manifest themselves near the western extremity of the Javan fissure and advanced toward the focus. This is a very interesting fact, especially since it is known that activity was manifested last winter in the northern branch or fissure, of this volcanic system, a new volcano being formed in Japan. So far there has been no disturbance near the focus itself.

Whether the present outburst in Java will be followed by others cannot, of course, be told, though the history of volcanic eruptions shows that a period of rest almost always follows a violent eruption.

The enormous loss of life and property caused by the Javan eruption and the earthquake at Ischia suggests the question whether nothing can be done to guard against such calamities. In some countries where earthquakes frequently occur buildings are constructed in a manner calculated to resist the shocks, and adoption of a suitable style of architecture wherever experience has shown that the crust of the earth is unstable would undoubtedly save many lives and a great deal of property. Yet, as was proved at Ischia, a precaution seemingly so simple is often disregarded, and buildings are erected in the neighborhood of volcanoes which tumble down at the first shock. It is more difficult to guard against the effects of a volcanic eruption, and the most sensible thing would be to keep away from volcanoes. But many volcanic districts appear to have irresistible attractions for human inhabitants, and Java furnishes a striking illustration of this fact. Although it has many times suffered from volcanic eruptions, in which thousands of its inhabitants have perished, yet its attractions are so great that it is one of the most densely populated spots on the globe and it is not likely that even the present calamity the greatest perhaps in the history of the island, will cause many of its ten million inhabitants to seek homes in more quiet regions of the earth.

THE lament of the Democrats because the Republicans will not agree to such an apportionment bill as they choose to dictate is reverberating in doleful echoes through the land. How fresh these "Dems" must be to think that the Republicans are willing to follow the example of the barber who advertised that he would shave his customers for nothing and give them a drink. Republicans are noted for their magnanimity, but cannot go that far. To a certain extent, however, they do consent to go. The Democrats can have 10 congressmen out of 28 and 20 senators out of 50. If they wont agree to that the Republicans unhesitatingly say that no apportionment can be made and adjournment will be the wisest course. Meanwhile the odium of the $300,000 extra session attaches to the Democratic Governor and House. If the Democrats are so conscientiously determined upon apportionment prev why did the House consent to adjournment of the regular session? Simply because after 150 days were expired further stay in Harrisburg would have been at the expense of the members of the Legislature and they could not have drawn any pay for it. This accounts for the adjournment, recall and long-drawn-out session, for the Democrats had it in their power to continue the regular session, as one branch cannot adjourn for more than three days without the consent of the other. But that wouldn't have been remunerative.

Alas! No Brains.

That is a very ingenious and expressive illustration in the current issue of Puck, which shows a man with his cranium sawed in two, the upper part elevated at such an angle from the lower as to expose the hollowness within—entire absence of brains. To him is attached the legend "Democracy." In the dim distance, on a barrel, is seated the emaciated form of Samuel J. Tilden and the barrel is labeled "Brains." "Democracy" is treading an uncertain path, avoiding a rock which is known as "Tariff" and seeming to be absolutely aimless in his movements. A passage from Shakespeare is adapted to the occasion—

* * * * "The time has been
That when the brains are out the man would die.
And then the end. But now they rise again
And, brainless, bump along the road to fame."

The illustration is an exact representation of the present attitude of "Democracy." The leaders will not express an opinion on any one of the important questions of the day and especially do they wish to avoid the great question of the tariff, which is so important to every working man. The country is now submitting to a low tariff which threatens to paralyze the iron industry. This tariff is the work of Democrats and was only agreed to by Republicans, because they considered legislation of some kind better than a period of suspense and uncertainty.

In nominations for high office the only question seems to be the financial standing of the nominees. What other attraction than $20,000,000 could induce this party to discuss even the possibility of the nomination of that bundle of old bones, nerves and general decrepitude, Samuel J. Tilden, who has one foot in the grave, and who has already once suffered defeat for the same office, we cannot imagine. What a president he would make! It is a disgrace thus to harass his declining years and to encourage him to hope for that which must prove but blighting disappointment and imperil his life. But, then, the Democrats would nominate old Satan himself if the monarch of the abodes of Evil would consent to roll out a barrel of shining gold.

THE recent cool turn of the weather admonishes farmers in the Northwest to be on the lookout for the early frosts of autumn. While the first frosts rarely do any general harm to vegetation, they are capable of working local injury, especially when, as at present, the corn crop is backward in many sections. Last year the first frosts occurred at several points in the North as early as August 19. In 1876 also, frost which did some damage to crops was reported from Michigan in the third week of August. This year the frosts are delayed somewhat, but the backwardness of corn and other fall staples makes the period a critical one. It is to be hoped the cold wave will prove beneficial to the crops in the rains it is producing, without any corresponding drawbacks in the way of damaging frosts. Farmers should be on the alert, however, and by the prompt gathering of crops forestall as far as possible any danger from this source.

THE "ancient manuscript" of the book of Deuteronomy recently "found" by a Mr. Shapira has been pronounced by competent critics a palpable forgery. We judge this manuscript story, the ridiculous canard about the discovery of Noah's ark and the reported preparations of a mythical gentleman to dredge the Red sea for traces of the chariots of the drowned Egyptian army, were all part of a conspiration by gentlemen who want to furnish material for the free thinkers' convention to work on at its sessions this year.

Pattison as a Boss.

The nomination of Judge Schwartz, in Berks county, is claimed, says the Phil'a North American, as an emphatic endorsement of Governor Pattison, who appointed him to the newly created office. But what need was there to indorse Governor Pattison? The people of Berks were not consulted when the appointment was made. The people did not ask for his appointment. He was appointed at the instance of a handful of politicians, who sought that vantage ground in order to control the action of the convention. These few political bosses, for years prominent operators of the Democratic machine, simply dictated the nomination of Judge Schwartz, who, as we have said, is no doubt a good and a just man, but who will owe his position, as he owes his appointment, to the boss system in politics. Here we have a singular contradiction. Governor Pattison owes his elevation to a revolt against centralized dictation, and Judge Schwartz owes his nomination to the dictation of a personal government, of which Pattison is the nominal head. There have been bad days' work in Pennsylvania politics very often, but none worse than this. The action of the people was completely forestalled by the Berks bosses in connection with a dictatorial State Government.

THE New York Sun of Tuesday, Aug. 28, prints letters from Garfield, Blaine, Woodford, Platt and others who were engaged in the Presidential campaign of 1880, relating to the politics of Indiana, Ohio and Maine. From these letters we must conclude that money was used in those states, but will the Sun please inform us in what campaign ever conducted was not money used. It is especially noticeable that not one of the letters written by Garfield refers to money, and we do not believe that an equal number of letters written by Hancock during that time if printed, would exhibit as much freedom from all reference to money as a factor in politics. If the Sun's only object is to prove that money was used in that campaign, we are willing to admit it. Good men of all parties contributed to the success of the party that premised to perpetuate the prosperity of the country. As the Sun failed so ignominously in its effort to prove that Gould paid for the elevation of Matthews to the Supreme Bench, or that he had anything to do with it, we should think it would retire from the field. Perhaps like the Maori or Courtney it don't know when it is whipped.

ALL the accounts of the Minnesota tornado agree in saying that the signs of it were distinctly visible for many minutes before it came, that there was time for everybody who was at home when it approached to get into the cellar, and that no one who took refuge in a cellar was hurt. All this seems to point to the conclusion that the towns which lie in the zone which these storms most frequently traverse, and which the meteorologists seem able to define, must create and maintain a new officer, whose duty will be simply that of a lookout, and provide him with bells or other means of giving the alarm when the usual signs of a tornado show themselves. Even if the construction of the houses in these regions, too, has not to be changed, the cellars will have to be prepared as refuges, and it is a question whether farmers will not provide themselves with a pit in every field, into which laborers can jump when likely to be caught by the storm when out working. Safety seems to lie below the surface of the ground, and nowhere else. Anyhow, it is very unlikely that the present condition of unpreparedness which these tornadoes everywhere find can last much longer, and it would be very un-American if it did so.

THERE is danger that the cowboys will capture the Presidential party.

GENERAL NOTES.

A Maine girl didn't want her lover to name a boat after her, because she didn't desire to read in the papers that "Matildy Slocum is up for repairs," "Matildy Slocum is in the dock to be scraped," etc.

"If this is not the solid truth, door me with a watermelon, and give the pieces to the Sunday school scholars," is a form of speech which is regarded in Georgia as imparting conclusiveness to an assertion.

A lady who is tenting with her young son and daughter near Asbury Park was awakened early in the morning by a noise near by, and saw a negro crawling along the tent floor. She screamed, and the intruder fled.

A disheartened deacon declares that there is no hope for the salvation of a man who will sit on a picket fence for three hours and a half to see a base ball match, and then refuse to go to church with his wife because "them pews is so confounded uncomfortable."

People rubbed with juniper seeds are perfectly secure from hurt by serpents. They may be driven away by burning hair, the sawdust of cedar, or a few drops of galbanum, green ivy or juniper. A few drops of carbolic acid placed in the mouth of a snake instantly destroys it.

At an ex-Confederate reunion at McKinney, Ga., it was resolved to return to General Cook of the United States Army, with the compliments of the captors, the sword he wore so gallantly when his command was captured at Newnan, in that State. Col. Hawkins of Texas had preserved it.

The editor of the only paper in Red Bluff, Cal., is in jail on a charge of murder. But he isn't dismayed at that. With the energy and persistence which everywhere characterizes the true journalist, he has turned his cell into a sanctum and works diligently away with pen, shears and paste-pot.

Eight months ago John Gouton, of Everson, Westmoreland county, swallowed a small lizard in water. He says that it gave him much trouble until a few days ago, when he fasted for 24 hours and then lay alongside a pale of water, whereupon, it is alleged, the lizard crawled up his throat and out of his mouth.

The mother of 23 children is living in Brownsville, Ga. She is still in the prime of life and vigor. Her husband, the only one she has had, is also alive. Twenty-three of the children are dead, though all lived several years. Among them were four pairs of twins, born within a period of six years.

The baptism of a number of negro converts at Camden recently was completed under the folds of a large American flag, which the minister had planted at the spot in the bay selected for the ceremony. Precisely what idea prevailed in the minds of the converts as to the efficacy of the Stars and Stripes is not made clear by the accounts of the affair.

At a wedding recently in Canton, Mo., a "parson," who is generally ready at a repartee, was knocked off his balance and completely non-plussed by an addition to his ceremony by an aged matron, who, immediately after hearing the words, "whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder," exclaimed with great earnestness, "Or no woman, either, for they're just as bad as the men."

Now that expert cracksmen can render the most ferocious watch dog harmless by the administration of anesthetics, through a keyhole or otherwise, the usefulness of canine guardians of property is much diminished. The little dog which barks with all his might at the least disturbance of the premises where he is kept may be more valuable than the most savage mastiff or the fiercest bloodhound.

The birthplace of George Washington is at the inner side of a peninsula having for its water boundary Mattox Creek, the Potomac River and Pope's Creek. The house in which Washington was born stood on a projection which is now called Burnt House Point. A road leads down to Bridge Creek Landing, a little less than two miles distant, where, it is probable, a steamboat wharf will be built, in order that the spot may be more easily accessible.

Tom Hayseed, a knowing young fellow from the country, was in town the other day and "put up" at one of the first-class hotels. After dinner he strolled out to the office, and picking up a toothpick from the box on the office counter, used it vigorously on a set of tobacco stained grinders, and then replaced it carefully in the box, saying as he did so: "Some fellers would put that in their pocket and carry it away, but there ain't nothing mean about me, I tell you."

When a lover leaves the house of his adored one at a late hour in the evening, and walks musingly homeward beneath the twinkling stars, his fond fancy pictures her, clothed in white samite, resting sweetly upon her pillow, with her unbound hair tossed about her sleeping face, and angels bending over her couch whispering heavenly dreams. Perhaps at that very moment she is in a pantry gnawing a crust or sitting flat on the floor paring her corns.

According to the American Newspaper Catalogue of Edwin Alden & Bro., Cincinnati, Ohio, just published, containing 800 pages, the total number of newspapers and magazines published in the United States and Canadas is 13,136; (showing an increase over last year of 1,028.) The total in the United States 12,169; Canadas 1,067. Published as follows: Dailies, 1,329; Tri-Weeklies, 71; Semi-Weeklies, 151; Weeklies, 9,955; Bi-Weeklies, 23; Semi-Monthlies, 237; Monthlies, 1,324; Bi-Monthlies, 12.

In the hope of getting the upper hand of the cockroaches in a room over their meat market John and Charles Weber of Cleveland smeared the woodwork and furniture with gasoline. Then they closed the door. In the evening they ascended with a lighted candle to see how the roaches were getting along. When they entered the room the gas produced by the gasoline exploded, and one of the brothers leaped from a second-story window and ran through the street with his clothing ablaze. The other brother was badly scorched, but he managed to send out a fire alarm.

Poetry.

A BAD SPELL.

She went about with look benign.
And hung her clothes upon the ligu,
Then called her husband in to dign.

He spoke to her in accents rough,
He disparaged the garden sto'gh—
He was a man of manners grough.

He said she knew she hated lamb,
The dinner was the merest shamb—
Why didn't she prepare some hamb?

She looked at him and muttered, pugh!
And asked "What can a woman dugh
To please a cranky man like yugh?"

Was she a woman to sit dumb,
While he came in with aspect glumb?
She would not stand it, no, 'e gumb!

His judgment of good food she doubted,
His grounds of criticisms scouted;
Half mad with rage these words she shouted.

Then with a look of pain and worry,
The wife arose and in great flurry,
Went to her mother's in a hurry.

HIS FIRST HIGH HAT.

I met him in the crowded street—
'Twas on a Sabb'th morn—
And on the gentle breezes sweet,
Repentant, erring man to greet,
The sound of bells was borne.

He passed me with averted eyes
And stony downcast face;
His mein was cold, his look was shy,
His vision bore a crimson dye,
And he quickened his tardy pace.

What was it, you ask, that made him so?
Ah! I can tell you that—
It was not coldness, you must know,
But woe, dear reader, mental woe;
He had on his first high hat!

I WONDER.

He kissed me—and I knew 'twas wrong
For he was neither kith nor kin;
Need one do penance very long
For such a tiny little sin?

He pressed my hand—that was not right.
Why will men have such wicked ways?
It was not for a moment quite,
But in it there were days and days.

There's mischief in the moon, I know;
I'm positive I saw her wink
When I requested him to go;
I meant it, too—I think.

But, after all, I'm not to blame;
He took the kiss; I do think men
Are born without a sense of shame!
I wonder when he'll come again?

—Oh! could there in this world be found
Some little spot of happy ground,
Without the village tattling,
How doubly blessed that spot would be,
Where all might dwell in liberty,
Free from the bitter misery
Of gossips' endless prattling.

Oh, that the mischief making crew
Were all reduced to one or two,
And they were painted red or blue,
That every one might know them.

Our Story Teller.

Aunt Sophie's Story.

"Do you know, Aunt Sophie, that you have never told me the romance of your long ago? I came in just to hear it this evening. And a grave look came into Georgia's merry blue eyes. Miss Chester turned her glance from the far off dreamland of the opal sunset to the little beauty who was daintily kneeling before her.

"How can you imagine that any romance is connected with my past, Georgia?"

The young lady glanced up at her aunt's deep, liquid brown eyes, and the heavy folds of satiny brown hair that the last sunbeams had changed to golden just then, and exclaimed with her usual candor:

"Oh, I know it very well, Aunt Sophie. Beautiful as you are—there, don't deny it—I would give my diamond set just to have such glorious eyes. Nor, tell me why you didn't marry."

"Very well, Georgia, if it will gratify you, you shall have those pages from my heart-book read. You may profit by the lesson it teaches.

"My father died when I was still a child, leaving me to the care of my brother and two elder sisters. My father had all his children educated at home, and would have followed the same plan regarding myself if he had lived, for he did not fancy the idea of sending girls away from home to be educated. But my brother thought differently, and when I was twelve he placed me in a boarding school in another State.

"Four years passed, and among my friends at school there was one to whom I was bound by the warmest of friendship—Bertha Grey. At last the vacation came when she must return to her distant home, and she entreated me to accompany her. My brother's consent was gained, and I was as happy as possible.

"He came to us—Bertha's brother, Elroyd Grey. It would be impossible, Georgia, to describe him. His rare charm was something indefinable. In the seclusion in which I had always lived I had mingled but slightly with the world. Every Sunday in the St. Berthold church, to which we were marshalled by our preceptress, a faint vision came to my eyes of the splendor and magnificence of life outside the college walls, but among all the faces I had scanned so curiously there had never been one to compare with his. I was but a foolish girl, perhaps, but when his deep voice came to me, rich, melodious, modulated, my very heart would pause in its throbbing. I have thought since that he understood and exerted his strange power at will. But I was quiet and reserved, and resisted all his attempts to establish a friendly intimacy with a pertinacity of which I was ashamed even then. Bertha was my friend and to her alone did I cling, wishing not for others. We arrived at Bertha's home, and I was introduced to Mrs. Grey—a tall, pale lady, who greeted me with such kindness that the tears came unbidden to my eyes.

"I can hardly tell how the next two months passed. Swiftly like an hour of golden, glowing dreams, that we remember afterward with a strange thrill of pain. Elroyd, Bertha and I—a pleasant little trio—rode, walked, talked, had boat excursions out over the glassy little lake, sat on the gallery in the beautiful calm, moonlit night, and sung sweet old songs that thrilled all the chords of the heart with their exquisite pathos, and when every other amusement was exhausted in the long glowing summer days, we sought the library. I do not know when the consciousness came to me first of my love for Elroyd Grey. It was almost overpowering in its depths and intensity. I concealed it so sedulously that even Bertha, to whom I had communicated every secret for the past two years, never suspected the truth. We rode, walked and talked as usual. We floated out over the mirror like surface of the lake in the jubilant summer evenings, and still I kept my heart's idol-worship enshrined sacredly in my heart.

"We stood one evening at the gate, Bertha, Elroyd and I. It was a peaceful scene upon which we were looking. The sky with its gleaming stars was reflected in the motionless lake. Even the mocking bird hushed its jubilant chorus, as if to listen to the silence.

"'What a calm, peaceful night! what rest, what quiet! Would that it might continue forever,' murmured Elroyd, turning his eyes upon me with a look that always rendered me restless and uneasy.

"'You are insatiable,' I said, with a laugh.

"'Yes, I want this glorious night to stay, with its deep rest and peace. But I know that the peace I see now will vanish almost as quickly as the night.'

"'Why?' I asked, half unconsiously.

"'Because the star that is illumining everything without and within will flash meteor-like from the horizon,' he said, sofily.

"I tried hard to conceal my emotion, succeeded I think, for never had I met his gaze more calmly. Just then Mrs. Grey called Bertha, and very glad of the interruption, I turned and went with my friend, calling back to him laughingly:

"'You may stay and watch your favorite night, Mr. Grey, while its beauty lasts.'

"'It has lost both already,' he returned, pointedly, and I felt my face burning with blushes. Ah, Georgia, the dreams that haunted my sleep that night!

"But the early morning mail brought sad news to me of my brother's death, and our sudden descent from wealth to poverty. He was fond of speculation, and had been remarkably successful until lately, when fortune turned from him in an enterprise in which he had staked all—so he lost all. I must stay where I was for the present, my sister wrote, until we could find a home.

"I told them of it all after a while. Bertha and Mrs. Grey sympathized with me kindly and sincerely. But through it all Elroyd Grey was silent.

"From that time I perceived a coldness in his manner, and he gradually drew away from his habits, Bertha and I were alone in our walks and rides, and we propelled our own boat over the glassy lake, leaving Mr. Grey to attend the important business that engrossed so much of his attention. Whatever grief I might have felt at discovering that I had been worshipping a clay idol none of them knew.

"I was resolute and determined, and before the month was half out all my plans were settled. I knew that my sister would be compelled to labor for a maintenance, and I resolved from first that I would bear my part of the burden. Without asking advice from anyone, I answered an advertisement for a governess that I had seen, and in two weeks received a letter of acceptance.

"When I wrote to my sisters, and apprised them of the step I had taken, they warmly opposed it, and declared they were more than able to support me, but I was firm and would not yield. At this time my friends were utterly ignorant of my intentions. A week before my departure I was standing at the gate waiting for Bertha to join me in a ride, when Elroyd came up and asked a little anxiously:

"'Will you not tell me now what you intend doing, Miss Chester? You know we are anxious to know.'

"I told him without hesitation. He listened until I had finished, and after awhile said with an anxiety he strove to conceal:

"'Thanks for your confidence. And since you are going away so soon, perhaps you would like to take away with you this remembrance of my happiness. I am going to be married to Miss Willoughby.'

"I was conscious of a heart-throb that startled me, and of some intense grief which I could not explain. But I met his wavering glance steadily, and replied:

"'I hope that you may be very happy.'

"Bertha came just then, and I went with her, thanking heaven in my heart that my wealth had been suddenly snatched away, since it had been the means of proving to me that Elroyd Grey bowed down with the thousands of others in his worship of mammon.

"Three years passed away. My elder sister married Mr. Arnold. Her husband died, and soon she followed him, leaving her little Georgia to my care. Then came another change that seemed like some beautiful vision from fairy land to myself and sister. An uncle whom we had long supposed to be dead, came back from Australia, wealthy and tired of wandering. He took us both under his care, and we were at rest and peace at last.

"Elroyd Grey came again and tried to weave the old subtle web around me. But I had broken its meshes once, and they were powerless.

"I turned away heartsick from all his vows and protestations, and told him it could never be. And so, Georgia, it all ended. He went away and I never saw him afterward. My life has been quiet and peaceful, but there is a wound that bleeds afresh when I hear of the vain worship of worthless idols."

In the gathering gloom Georgia wept softly.

The Mill and the Still.

Harper's Weekly of August 18, 1883, has a full page illustration entitled, "The Mill and the Still," which on one side represents a happy group of father, mother and two children gathered around the table, an angelic being handing them bread. On the other side is a drunken father, sorrowing mother, ragged and starving children, while above them is Death pouring flaming alcohol from a bottle upon the fallen man. Both the angel and Death are standing in the midst of a sheaf of rye, which leads Dr. H. H. Kane, a writer in the same number, to remark:

So staple and universal an article of diet is bread, so important and abundant an article of commerce is grain and so naturally is the one associated with the other that we scarcely ever give the subject of cereals as a source of liquor the consideration that it deserves. To the average individual corn and grain mean food, and chiefly bread; and to assert to such a one that grain is as great a curse as it is a blessing is almost invariably to call forth both surprise and indignation.

And yet it is true. Corn, typical of all grain, according to its subsequent treatment, according to the process to which it is subjected, comes forth, from mill or still, a blessing or a curse—bread or liquor. Both children of a common mother, the Cain and Abel of post-cereal life, they differ as essentially in every characteristic as do two human beings; one brings health, strength, and happiness to even the humblest homes, the staple food of all nations, the basis of all nourishment; the other, save in very rare instances and under peculiar circumstances, an unmitigated curse, bearing disease, dishonor and even death unto thousands of homes, blasting fair young lives, blunting every good attribute of mind and soul, prostituting honor, honesty and integrity, deadening conscience, inciting to crime, leading to rags, squallor and starvation, manning the gallows, peopling the poor house, crowding the courts and filling the prisons.

To it may be justly ascribed nine tenths of all crime, suicide, poverty and prostitution; from its deadly seed spring idiocy and insanity. Through its agency family ties are sundered, promising lives engulfed in debt and dishonor, friends' secrets ruthlessly betrayed, hopes and ambitions blasted, and God's masterpiece of creation—man himself—made a bloated wreck.

In no sense a food, alcohol will neither impart nourishment nor sustain life; but on the contrary, its use invites, causes, and complicates disease, both organic and functional, poisons the blood and tissues, weakens the muscles, disorders the nervous system, and destroys the mind and faculties.

How marked the contrast between the two! the one in every sense life giving, happiness bestowing, body-nourishing; the other essentially a destroyer of all these, whose foot-steps are invariably accompanied by misery, despair and dishonor. Yet the difference is but a step—simply one of degree. The floured grain moistened and kneaded, leavened with a touch of yeast, commences to ferment. The starch of the flour, through the agency of the yeast, breaks down into alcohol and carbonic acid gas, the latter penetrating every part of the loaf, and making it light and spongy. Then comes the heat of the oven just at the proper moment, killing the yeast germs, putting a sudden stop to all fermentation, and giving us the brown and fragrant loaves of bread.

Huge tanks and vast in which thousands of bushels of grain are soaking. The same leavening of the mass, the same fermentation and breaking down of the starch into carbonic acid and alcohol, but so treated and favored that the latter is yielded in the largest possible amount. No restraining hand of heat to limit the process at the point where food ends and liquor begins, but every endeavor made to obtain the latter. Then the gaping maw of the still, and the serpentine coil pouring forth its steady stream of liquor, man's worst enemy. Liquor is simply one step beyond bread in the same chemical process, yet how widely, terribly different in their effects upon man!

"I was made to be eaten, and not to be drank;
To be husked in a barn, not soaked in a tank,
I come as a blessing when put in a mill;
As a blight and a curse when run thro' a still.
Make me up into loaves, and your children are fed;
But into a drink, I will starve them indeed.
In bread I'm a servant the eater shall rule,
In drink I'm a master, the drinker a fool.
Then remember my warning—my strength I'll employ,
If eaten to strengthen, if drank to destroy."

One of the letters of introduction Miss Kate Field brought with her to Denver was from Sir Charles Dilke to Judge McCurdy. She sent a note to the Windsor hotel office, asking where the Judge could befound. The answer came back: "Don't know; he's been dead eight years."

How much Makes a Man Rich.

"To be rich," said William L. Marcy, at one time secretary of state, "requires only a satisfactory condition of mind. One man may be rich with $100, while another, in possession of millions, may think himself poor, and if the necessities of life are enjoyed by each it is evident that the man who is best satisfied with his possession is the richest." To illustrate this idea, Mr. Marcy related the followidg anecdote: "While I was governor of the state of New York I was called upon one morning at my office by a rough specimen of a backwoodsman, who stalked in and commenced conversation by inquiring 'if this was Mr. Marcy?' I replied that was my name. 'Bill Marcy?' said he, I nodded assent. 'Used to live in Southport, didn't ye?' I answered in the affirmative, and began to feel a little curious to know who my visitor was and what he was driving at. 'That's what I told 'em,' cried the backwoodsman, bringing his hand on his thigh with tremendous force. "I told 'em you was the same Bill Marcy who used to live in Southport; but they would not believe it, and I promised the next time I came to Albany to come and see you and find out for certin. Why, you know me, don't you, Bill?" I didn't exactly like to ignore his acquaintance altogether, but for the life of me I could not recollect having seen him before, and so I replied that he had a familiar countenance, but that I was not able to call him by name. "My name is Jack Smith," answered the backwoodsman, "and we used to go to school together thirty years ago in the little red school house in old Southport. Well, times have changed since then, and you have become a great man, and got rich, I suppose?" I shook my head and was going to contradict that impression, when he broke in: "Oh! yes you are. I know you are rich; no use denying it. You was controller for a long time; and the next time we heard of you, you was governor. You must have had a heap of money, and I am glad of it—glad to see you getting along so smart. You were always a smart lad at school and I knew you would come to something." I thanked him for his good wishes and opinion, but told him that political life did not pay so well as he imagined. "I suppose," said I, "fortune has smiled on you since you left Southport?" "Oh, yes," said he, "I hain't got nothing to complain of. I must say I have got along right smart. You see shortly after you left Southport our whole family moved up into Vermont and put right into the woods, and I reckon our family cut down more trees and cleared more land than any other in the whole state." "And so you have made a good thing of it. How much do you consider yourself worth?" I asked, feeling a little curious to know what he considered a fortune, as he seemed to be so well satisfied with his. "Well," he replied, "I don't know exactly how much I am worth, but I think (straightening himself up) if all my debts were paid I should be worth $300 clear cash!" He was rich, for he was satisfied."

Lake Winnipseogee.

Captain Eugene Sullivan, a submarine diver, from Boston, who recently made an unsuccessful search for the body of E. L. Dunklee, drowned in Lake Winnipseogee, saw some things of an interesting character while under water. What is known as Eagle Island, he says, is really the top of a hill, which rises some one hundred feet from the bottom of the lake, with just the brow of the hill protruding from the water. This hill is very steep, and is covered with cliffs and ledges, many of which are from thirty to forty feet high. At some distance from Eagle island is a vast plain thickly covered with eel grass and literally alive with eels of all sizes. Captain Sullivan also encountered large shoals of horn-pouts near this plain, and in fact reports fish of all kinds to be very numerous and in some cases very large. The "finny denizens of the deep" seemed to take kindly to the human intruder on the domains, and swarmed around him in large numbers, nibbling at his armor and carefully inspecting every portion of the rare curiosity from up above. The diver also discovered a spring of cold water bubbling up from the bottom of the lake, and surrounded with quicksands, into which he walked and commenced sinking, but was promptly pulled out by his men above when the proper signal was given. Of course, if the body of a person who has been drowned should rest on the quicksands surrounding one of these springs, it would speedily be engulfed never to appear again and perhaps this will stand for one reason why bodies of many persons lost in the lake have never been recovered.

A stately and handsome man registered at a California watering place as an English lord. With him were his wife and two daughters. They took the best rooms in the hotel, ordered extra delicacies in food and the finest wines, and in every way common to such resorts spent money without stint. It was soon discovered that their claim to aristocracy was fraudulent, and they departed as soon as the exposure caused a cessation of social exaltation. But they paid all their bills, gave the menials generous fees, and betrayed no other reason for the deception than a desire to be lionized. In that they were fully gratified. Their identity was not ascertained, and it is only certain that they possessed wealth, education and politeness.

Pittsburgh has a fruit dealer so innately pious that he invariably writes it "D-mson plums," and if they are bad, says and writes it, "D-maged fruit." The good man ain't all dead yet.

High Tide at Atlantic City.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 29.—There is not a place on our beach front that has not been damaged to some extent by the high tide and heavy surf of to-day, and the total loss will not be less than $75,000. Long before high water, which was at 6 o'clock, the boardwalk began to wash away, and by high water the beach along the centre of the city was a mass of debris. Bath houses, restaurants, photograph galleries and stores with dwellings attached, which were built so far from the surf that it was thought that no sea could reach them, were undermined and carried bodily into the ocean and beaten by the waves into fragments. Two hours after high water to night the tide had fallen but little and great anxiety is felt about the next high water as the wind from the northwest is increasing in force and should it continue until to-morrow the damage will be more than double that of to-day. The surf was by far the heaviest ever seen. The branch of Camden and Atlantic railroad company along the beach from this place to South Atlantic City was badly washed and the passengers who took the late train to this place were compelled to abandon the train and walk a distance of five and a-half miles. All the railway tracks between here and Absecon, except the West Jersey, are submerged and will undoubtedly sustain much damage.

Volcanic Eruptions.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—A dispatch from Batavia, Java, says: The towns of Anjer, Tjiringine and Teleokbelong were destroyed by volcanic eruptions. All the light houses in Sunda Straits have disappeared, and where the mountain Kramatan formerly stood the sea now flows. The aspect of Sunda Straits is much changed and navigation is dangerous.

BATAVIA, Aug. 29.—The tidal wave completely destroyed Anjer, and many persons were killed. The loss of life among both Europeans and natives at North Bantam is enormous. Since noon yesterday everything is quiet, sky clear and communication with Serang restored. The temperature fell ten degrees Monday, but is now normal. The town is covered with a thin layer of ashes, which was so hot when falling that it killed birds. Telegraph linemen report that while repairing line near Anjer Monday morning they saw a high column of the sea approaching with a roaring noise. They fled without learning the fate of the inhabitants. The quarries at Nerak have disappeared, and all the people of the place have perished.

The Prohibition Question in Missouri.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 29.—Governor Crittenden is reported to be seriously considering the question of calling and extra session of the legislature either to amend the Downing Sunday law so as to make it apply to St. Louis or to prepare and submit a prohibitory amendment to the constitution at the next general election. The governor in an interview is reported to have spoken as follows: "I am an anti-prohibitionist from the soles of my feet to the crown of my head but I feel with the people that if a law is to be defied in St. Louis, and I have to choose between lawlessness and prohibition I am a prohibitionist." Under such a provocation prohibition will carry the state by 50,000 majority.

The Rothschild of Russia.

The richest man in the Czar's domain is a little, shriveled-up old fellow, with sore eyes, care-worn face, and hesitating step, almost slovenly in outward appearance. Yet in financial influence he is to Russia what Vanderbilt is to America. He is a Muscovite, the grandson of a man who left Hanover and took up his residence in Russia during the reign of Alexander I. This little man has no claim to noble distinction, but as the Czar one time by accident addressed him as "Baron," he has since been known as Baron deSteiglits, and has negotiated almost every loan of the Russian government. This man has millions of millions of money at his control, and continually adds to his prodigious fortune. He is a widower and is childless, but has an adopted daughter who will probably inherit his vast wealth. Such is the Rothschild of Russia.

Too Highly Colored.

New York Dairy.

"What's that thing?" asked a dairyman, as a chromo peddler held up a picture in which all the hues of the rainbow were displayed in reckless profusion without regard to harmony or correctness.

"A cow," replied the smiling art connoisseur, with a show of pride.

"A cow?" gasped the milk handler. "Well, that's the first time I ever saw a green cow browsing on salmon-colored grass. Here, John!" he yelled to the hired man; "bring me the gun!"

But the chromo fiend climbed the fence and made a break for the woods.

Lynchers Dispersed by the Police.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 28.—A crowd of 500 persons last night surrounded the jail where the suspected murderers of Hertell and his wife are incarcerated and demanded that they be delivered up. The jailor was preparing for a defense of the prison when a squad of mounted police armed with rifles dispersed the mob. It is rumored that another attempt to lynch the prisoners will be made to-night. Detectives are at work to discover the perpetrators of the crime.

Poot's wife remarked to him, as they started out the other night to take supper with the Browns, that she expected Mrs. B. would have a stunning coiffure. "Well, I'm sure I hope so," grumbled Poots, "I haven't had anything good to eat since we were at mother's."

At a country convention in Georgia the clerk, with an envelope in his hand, stepped down to the edge of the platform and called out: "Here is a dispatch for Colonel—" Just then a locomotive whistle blew, drowning the speaker's voice. Instantly the congregation rose unanimously and proceeded in a body to the platform to receive the dispatch.

"Now tell me truly, Professor Sharp, what do you think of my voice?" asked Miss Macscreecher, after giver the professor a specimen of her vocalism. "Oh, my dear Miss Macscreecher," replied the polite professor, "I couldn't be so rude as that." In her confidential moments Miss Macscreecher says she doesn't think much of Professor Sharp's abilities as a musician.

This employing college students for table waiters at summer hotels makes trouble. You see girls have very little discrimination at times, and when a young lady is introduced to a youth whose father may be worth $1,000,000, and she learns that he is a collegian, and asks: "Oh, were you waiting on table at the Spray Cliff House last summer?" it makes a very embarrassing situation.

A Boston newspaper man while on the summit of Mount Washington was struck by lightning and only slightly injured. When a book-agent is struck by lightning and escapes injury the inference is that the electric bolt struck him on the cheek; but in the case of a Boston newspaper man it is—well, we can't always tell. The lightning is said to have gone limping down the mountain moaning painfully—Norristown Herald.

Tom Brown was an ignorant, queer boy, and was constantly doing things of an unaccountable nature. One day a lady for whom he had been doing chores said to him: "Tom, you're an odd genius." "Yes'm," said Tom, not knowing exactly what she meant. "I don't quite comprehend you." "What, mum?" "I mean I don't know how to take you." "Dad does." "How?" "He takes me by the seat of the breeches, mum, and the nape of the neck, and shakes me like I was a rat."

"Can you put me up a prescription?" asked a leading light of the Good Templars of a druggist's apprentice. "No, sir; I ain't got that far yet, and the boss has gone to lunch." "I'm in a hurry, and would like to have this filled," said the customer, laying a prescription on the counter. "Oh, I know what that is," said the boy, brightening up; "the deacons of the church around the corner come in here every Sunday and get it for the colic." And the boy handed him down a bottle of spiritus frumenti, and set a tumbler before the customer.—San Francisco Post.

Killed by the Fall of a Cornice.

AKRON, O., Aug. 28.—A part of a cornice on an unfinished building fell yesterday and striking the scaffolding precipitated three men standing upon it into the basement, twenty-five feet below. Samuel Haines, a stone mason, was crushed by a stone weighing three hundred pounds and died in twenty minutes. William Carmichael was badly injured and J. A. Kohler, a Republican candidate for the Legislature, was caught on a projecting piece of iron and held on till he was rescued, escaping uninjured.

Suspicions of Suicide.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 27.—John W. Bigelow, of New York, was found dead in his bed at his cottage, on Washington street, Newport, on Sunday. He was recently rescued from drowning, at which time a quiet rumor prevailed that he had attempted suicide. The suicide theory has again been started, the alleged cause being financial difficulties, but the doctor and the family deny that there is any foundation for the belief.

Jews Plundered by Peasants.

EGERSZEG, Aug. 28.—Large bands of peasants, armed with guns and axes, entered Zalaloevoe to-day and plundered thirteen Jewish shops. They subsequently left the place, but threatened to return. Troops have been summoned to prevent further disturbance. The annual fairs have been forbidden. A government commission has been ordered to inquire into the disorders.

Won't Give the Date.

BUFFALO, Aug. 28.—The Frenchman, H. Balsau, who was to swim the whirlpool rapids, to-day, visited the falls but did not attempt the feat. He returned to New York to-night. He says that he will attempt to swim the rapids in the future but will name no date.

Storage Room for Silver Dollars.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Plans have been completed for the proposed new silver vault to be located under the cash room of the Treasury Department. The storage capacity of the vault will be about 23,000,000 standard silver dollars.

Wages to be Reduced.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 27.—The glass manufacturers of the west will meet in Chicago on Wednesday, August 29th, to take definite action in regard to ordering a general reduction in the wages of their employes.

"No Sir; I don't believe newspaper men are more dissipated than any other class of men who earn their living by their brains," said MR. A. H. Siegfried, manager of the advertising department of the St. Paul Pioneer-Press. "Still those of them who do desk work are tempted to stimulate, for it's very hard on the nerves and stomach."

"As for example——"

"As for example, in my own case, I stuck to my desk on this paper until my nerves were like a bunch of telegraph wires after a gale, and my stomach kept about as good time as a two-dollar watch. My friends suggested this and the doctors advised that, but one day I caught on to an 'ad.' of PARKER'S TONIC and tried it. I have never endorsed a proprietary medicine before, but I shall depart from my rule and say that the Tonic is not merely the best thing but the only thing that breaks up these attacks. All desk-workers should make a note of it."

This preparation, which has been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will hereafter be advertised and sold simply under the name of PARKER'S TONIC. As unprincipled dealers are constantly decieving their customers by substituting inferior articles under the name of ginger, and as ginger is really an unimportant ingredient, we drop the misleading word.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, contain the genuine medicine if the fac-simile signature of Hiscox & Co. is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

ALL FOR NOTHING.

Why the Doctor was Disgusted and what Might have been Done without Him.

"Well, wife," said Dr. E——, as he entered his house, which was situated in a cosy village in New York, "I have got back from a long and dreary ride away down among the mountains, and all to no purpose whatever. The messenger said the man wouldn't live till morning when the fact is he had only an ordinary attack of colic. If the simpletons had only had sense enough to put a BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER on his stomach he would have been all right in an hour or two. But some folks are slow to learn," added the old physician, swallowing the cup of steaming tea which his wife had just poured for him.

Doctor E—— was right, yet people do learn, even though slowly. The rapidly increasing use of Benson's plaster proves this beyond question, and the good doctors are certain to be saved much of their needless toil. In all cases capable of being affected by a plaster Benson's acts efficiently and at once. The genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the centre. Price 25 cents.

Foreign Flashes.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 30.—The czar and czarina of Russia have arrived here. They were received by the king of Denmark and the king of Greece on board the royal yacht. This morning their majesties were taken ashore and escorted to the royal palace by the principal civil and military authorities and foreign ministers. Immense crowds assembled at the landing place and along the route to the palace, warmly cheering the imperial visitors. Their majesties were received at the palace by the queen of Denmark, princess of Wales and a brilliant court.

PESTH, Aug. 30.—Herr Tisza, president of the Hungarian council, notified Herr Ban, of Croatia, that the Hungarian arms which were removed from the official buildings in Agram by the Croatian malcontents, must be replaced. Herr Ben hesitates to obey the order, and threatens to resign rather than carry it out. The bishop of Agram has remonstratod with Ban in regard to his propose t action.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, in an address before the chamber of commerce of Greenock last evening, combatted the proposals of Sir Alexander Galt for a federated union, on the ground that Canada would never submit to being ruled at London. He spoke in condemnation of the protective policy and predicted that Canada would soon return to free trade. He scouted the idea of the separation of Canada from England. Canadians would give their last man and dollar to maintain the prestige and power of England. Mackenzie sailed today for Quebec.

The steamer Amerique will sail for New York on Saturday with the cargo and passengers of the steamer St. Germain, which was damaged in the collision with the steamer Woodburn.

Ex-Governor Sprague Not to be Trifled With.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 2.—At a meeting of the Quidneck company Saturday afternoon, the stockholders being represented by Assignee Pomeroy and Trustee Farnsworth, Stephen Harris was elected president and Charles B. Gould secretary Mr. Harris proceeded to the office of the company and saw William Sprague and demanded possession of the property. Mr Sprague said that he was no longer president, but that he represented the president, and if Mr. Harris attempted to take possession he would kill him. Mr. Harris pleasantly remonstrated with the irate man. But Mr. Sprague reiterated his statement that he would kill him, and said that if Mr. Harris went to the mill in his absence he had men there who would brow him into a trench a cold corpse. Mr. Harris then withdrew.

The March of the Presidential Party Finished.

MAMMOTH HOT SPRINGS, Wy., Sept. 1.—The march of the Presidential party of three hundred and fifty miles is finished The last campfire has been lighted and has burned to ashes, and to-day the party takes a train, awaiting them seven miles from here, and starts for Livingstone, on the main line of the Northern Pacific Railway. Governor Crosby returns to his post of duty at Helena. Senator Vest will begin his journey through Dakota, visiting the various Indian Agencies, in pursuance of his duties as a member of the Joint Committee of which Senator Davis is Chairman, and the President and other members of the party will proceed, via St. Paul, to Chicago, where they will arrive Tuesday morning.

Arrested for Burglary.

OLEAN, N. Y., Aug. 30.—It is thought that a clue to a gang of burglars, which has been operating throughout Potter county, Pennsylvania, for a year or more, has been discovered by an arrest which has caused great surprise, being that of a prominent citizen of the county. The arrest was brought about by a singular circumstance connected with the finding of some papers stolen from the store of Charles Armstrong in Coudersport. The burglary was committed in November, 1882. A large amount of property and money was taken from the store besides the papers, which were in a drawer, which was taken with them. Last spring the drawer and papers were found hidden under a bridge near Coudersport. Among the papers a due bill was discovered which did not belong to Mr. Armstrong, and which was not in his store at the time of the robbery. It was payable to James Card and signed by Birney Clark. The matter was kept quiet to await further developments, but nothing new coming to light Clark was confronted with the note and an explanation demanded. He made declaration that he had paid the due bill, but that it had never been handed over to him by Card, the latter telling him that it was among his papers at home and that he would look it up. Subsequently Card approached and he could not explain how the paper had become mixed with stolen ones. Satisfied that the circumstances warranted the proceeding, Card was arrested, charged with having committed the burglary in question. Whether the arrest will lead to the unraveling of the mysteries of the previous and subsequent robberies time only will tell.

Storms at Sea.

HALIFAX, Aug. 31.—Late intelligence of the effects of Wednesday night's storm around the coast of Nova Scotia shows the damage to shipping was quite extensive. Ten schooners were driven ashore, some completely wrecked, and others badly damaged. The fury of the gale was terrific. The tower of the new Catholic church at Cape Breton was carried away, and a large wooden building was moved from its foundation.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—A St Johns, N. F., special says: A fleet of United States fishing vessels, which arrived here last night, report that there was a violent storm on Great Banks on Sunday last. The gale rose from the eastward at 8 o'clock in the morning, when hundreds of dories were away from the vessels overhauling trauls. Captain Hillier reports seeing scores of dories turned upside down, and that the wreckage was strewn in every direction along his track coming westward. One French "banke" lost four dories and all their crews. It is computed from all the sources of information that one hundred dories and eighty men have been lost in the storm Most of the dories were swept by the waves from schooners' decks, and the remainder collapsed in the sea.

A Cave Under St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 29.—While some workmen were engaged last night in digging a foundation at No. 1106 Collins street they discovered an underground cavern, whose walls and ceiling were braced with timbers, evidently of great age. The floor was of solid rock and along it soon crept a party of exploration, who proceeding in a straight line east for about fifty feet, came to an angle and followed another arm of the cave which pointed towards Carr street. Beyond the turn was another and smaller opening, which they entered and walked on for some distance, when they came to another turn, pointing north. This turning was about seventy five feet long and at the end of that distance the cave again turned east. In their explorations the party came upon several relics of undoubted historical value, among them an Indian bow, a flint-lock, some pottery and a small brass or copper box containing five parchment documents neatly folded and written partly in French and partly in Spanish. To-day the place was closed to the public in order that local scientists may have an opportunity of making an official investigation of its contents.

Stories Around the Camp-Fire.

GETTYSBURG, Aug. 30.—A clear, bright afternoon and evening again filled the town with strangers. A portion of the comrades having gone home the camp was not as lively as heretofore. There was no dress parade in the evening, but instead of it a camp-fire was started, with Assistant Adjutant General Stewart as master of ceremonies. Speeches, music by the band, songs and jest filled several hours in a most enjoyable manner for the large crowd of spectators as well as for the participants. To-morrow morning the veterans will break camp, thus closing one of their most successful encampments on the field which they did so much to make famous. The week has been one of enjoyment, nothing having occurred to mar the general pleasure.

Dr. Green Opposed to Underground Wires.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Dr. Norvin Green, president of the Western Union Telegraph Company, was a witness before the Senate sub-committee on labor and education today. Dr. Green told at much length what he knew about the telegraph business. He believed if the telegraph companies were compelled to put their wires under ground it would result to the detriment of the service.

Given Arsenic Instead of Whiskey.

LANCASTER, Sept. 1.—John B. Sener, a well-known young man of this city, was fishing along the Conestoga yesterday when a stranger met him and asked him to take a drink out of a bottle which he had, saying it contained whiskey. Sener tasted it and at once became very sick. He was taken to his home, where he is now lying in a critical condition. The attending physician found that he had drunk arsenic. It is supposed that robbery was the intention of the stranger, who escaped after being seen by some of Sener's friends.

Of Interest to Certain Corporations.

ALLENTOWN, Pa. Aug. 31.—Suit has been brought against the Bethlehem iron company by a large number of former employes to recover amounts deducted from their wages at the end of each month in payment of bills incurred at the company's store. Judgment has been rendered against the company in two cases for more than $300. The total amount involved is very large and the question is one which concerns other corporations in the state.

A New Line of Postal Cars.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Superintendent Thompson, of the Railway Mail Service, has ordered the establishment of a line of postal cars on the Pennsylvania Railroad between New York, Pittsburg, Indianapolis and St. Louis, the cars to begin running on Saturday, September 1. Leaving New York at 6 p. m. the postal car will arrive at St. Louis on the morning of the second day at 7 30 o'clock.

An Altoona Man Nominated.

WILLIAMPORT, Pa., Aug 30.—The greenback state convention to-day nominated T. P. Ryuder, of Altoona, for auditor general, and Captain A. G. Marsh, of Erie, for state treasurer. The platform, among other things, declares in favor of prompt legislation for the greatest good to the greatest number, and is opposed to prolonging the sessions of our state legislature at public expense for the accomplishment of partisan purposes.

Is it Asiatic Cholera?

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 31.—The south side is agitated over an alleged case of Asiatic cholera. A man named Watchky was taken sick and Dr. Seelowski, who has had experience in Turkish hospitals, pronounced the disease cholera. Dr. Richard, assistant health commissioner, agrees with Dr. Seelowski but the other physicians pronounce the case only one of cholera morbus.

The Naval Cadets' Trial.

ANNAPOLIS, Aug. 30.—The naval court martial to try seventeen naval cadets charged with hazing fourth class men met to-day and adjourned, the papers not being ready for them to proceed The court meets to-morrow at 10 o'clock on the ship Santee, when the testimony will begin.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS

That Bogus $375 Check.

The Lock Haven Journal of Thursday gives the following particulars regarding the sale of the valuable team of horses at Centre Hall on Tuesday, Aug. 28, for which a counterfeit check was given and which was alluded to in the News of Wednesday:

On Tuesday a man named James Santee bought a team of horses of H. C. Shirk, a farmer living near Centre Hall, and gave a check of $375 on the Union National Bank of Lewisburg. Santee drove to Centre Hall and registered, giving his residence as Hazelton, Pa. The fact that the check was signed "J. Santee" caused some misapprehension on the part of those who knew about the transaction, and after the purchaser's departure, inquiry was made. The manager of the Lock Haven telephone exchange was requested yesterday to ask the Hazelton exchange whether there was such a man residing there, and an affirmative answer was received.

The Union bank at Lewisburg was next telephoned, and the officers replied that no such man had an account there. Hazelton was again called, and this time a reply came back saying that a man named Thos. Santee resided there, but that nothing was known of James Santee.

There is no longer any doubt but that Santee is a thief, and the authorities in this part of the State have all been notified. He is a middle-aged man, heavy set, has a sandy mustache and goatee, weighs about 200 pounds, and is five feet eight to ten inches high.

The team consisted of two black mares, each with white hind foot, and star on forehead of each horse. The animals are fine looking and weigh about 1,000 pounds each. The team went through Rebersburg about 3 p. m. Tuesday.

—Last week the negro boy named Roberts, who was brought to Bellefonte from Philipsburg, was sentenced to confinement in the county jail. Wednesday morning Dr. Smith's commission as associate judge was received and he took the oath of office. For some reason there was a demonstration of applause at this point, which was quelled. Then the Court went to work in a business-like style, evidence being taken in the case of Commonwealth vs. John P. Lucas, who is charged with fraudulently destroying a note.

—Sheriff Dunkle is now entertaining eight prisoners.

September Sayings.

* * The Bradford Republican says that much of the trouble in married life originates in disputing who shall carry the pocketbook. We always thought it was customary for the man to carry the pocketbook and his wife the bundles.

* * A Bellefonte man says he considers that Oscar Wilde has a wonderful mind. Yes, so he has—wonderful shallow.

* * It is predicted that within eight years Bellefonte and vicinity will be all cut up with railroads. Parties desiring building lots with room enough to hang out the clothesline had better buy now.

* * A Chinaman attempted to jump on a freight train at Altoona the other day and had one of his legs cut off. A Chinaman's legs, it seems, are not any more durable than an American's.

* * Sourbeck, the fruiter, attempted to palm off a lot of bread fruit on a Pennsvalley farmer for California plums, the other day. He has thus far escaped arrest.

* * We've just discovered what has become of the trade dollar. Cruse, the tobacconist, has a peck of 'em in his safe.

* * The hunting season opened very auspiciously for a Westmoreland county man. He fired at a quail that had lodged in his corn crib, and killed a $200 horse.

* * Six cents buys a watermelon in Atlanta. The same amount will purchase a fair sized cucumber in Bellefonte—that is, if you pay cash down.

* * If something isn't done pretty soon to head off the Eurekas they'll be applying for admission to the league. Perhaps Sullivan would undertake to "knock 'em out."

* * Our Italian citizens are emigrating to other parts, and there are two noticeable results in consequence, viz: An absence of afternoon picnics at the coal sheds and a falling off in the consumption of beer.

* * The dog-day season was a miserable failure in Bellefonte. Out of our canine population of two hundred or three hundred not one "purp" took it into his head to run mad and chase somebody up a tree box.

* * A scientific writer says a well rounded nose is an indication of wisdom. We presume, then, that a well flattened nose is an indication of lunacy. If there are any flat-nosed people in Bellefonte they ought to be looked after.

* * A big tramp called at a Linn street residence this morning for hot rolls and coffee and some sausage. He was given the cold shoulder instead, flavored with shoe leather.

* * A new song is badly needed in Bellefonte. "Wait till the clouds roll by" is getting musty and "Over the garden wall" has given one man the fits.

* * An Illinois woman allowed a bee to sting her on the jugular vein and died. Bellefonte ladies should take warning from this and keep an eye on their jugular.

* * A lady lost one of her shoes off while crossing Allegheny street this morning, and the road was blockaded for an hour and a half. She is from the West.

* * It was reported on Saturday that a grey squirrel had been seen in the vicinity of Howard, and thirteen Bellefonters started in that direction Monday morning. If that squirrel escapes it should be pensioned.

—The hotels of Philipsburg, in the estimation of many Bellefonte travelers, are gems of elegance and comfort. There is the Parker House, under the management of Mr. Corcoran, furnished from basement to roof in walnut, the floors covered with Brussels carpets and all other appointments to correspond. There is the Potter House, with Mr. McOmbre the presiding genius. The new addition makes it sufficiently commodious, and it is deservedly popular. Indeed, Philipsburg from end to end is an oasis of industry. It freshens the wits, accelerates the flow of blood, awakens anew the interest to pace its boulevards and see its energy. A steam heating company has been merged into the Electric light company and is working actively to put its apparatus in order. We are not yet very old, and it is our humble hope that we may live to see the day when Bellefonte will also vie with Philipsburg in this spirit which should characterize all live towns of the Nineteenth century.

—A meeting of the bar was held last week to appoint a committee to revise the laws by which the Centre and Huntingdon county courts are governed. The committee consists of six attornies: A. O. Furst, Adam Hoy and D. S. Keller, Esqs, represent the Centre county bar, and Major R. B. Petriken, Col. Dorris and S. T. Brown, Esq., representing the bar of Huntingdon county.

Where the Window Glass is Manufactured.

On Saturday morning work was resumed at the Bellefonte Glass Works for the season of 1883-84. The principal room in which the great furnaces are situated is fairly quivering with hot waves which issue from

> Furnaces to the right of you,
> Furnaces to the left of you,
> Hotter than blazes,

Instead of one large furnace in the centre of the room around which all the men gathered last year, three furnaces are quivering with a fervent heat, a blow furnace built of pressed and common brick having been erected at both the north and south ends of the building. On either side of these blow furnaces are the places in which the glass is swung in the work of forming the cylinders. Instead of being elevated, as formerly, openings are formed in the floor and the blowers are not required to mount a flight of steps to perform their work. This makes it much more convenient for them. The centre furnace, in which the material is melted for the glass, was renewed this year, all the material used in its construction being manufactured at the glass works. It is principally constructed of German clay which will bear a wonderful degree of heat. All of the furnaces worked perfectly. Indeed, the work of heating was accomplished so much more rapidly than usual that three pots were cracked at first. The result of all this change, which was accomplished during the warm weather and at minimum expense, is to increase the capacity of the works from one-fourth to one-third, or six boxes of glass per week to each one of the ten blowers, without any corresponding increase in the number of employes, one or two additional teasers being the only increase that was made over last year's complement of men. There is also even better system, if possible, in all the arrangements than last year. The men went to work this morning in the highest spirits, and everything augurs a prosperous season. Over sixty men are on the pay rolls.

A new "pot shop" has been built, where the pots to be used in the furnace are made. These pots, which are made of German clay, are formed quite dexterously by a skilled workman. They are all of the same size and shape and will last from fifteen minutes to ten weeks time, depending entirely on circumstances over which there is no control.

It is expected that they will blow glass six times a week, each such period being eight hours in length. Five times per week of ten hours each was the rule during most of last year. Numerous orders are to be filled and the glass is increasing in popularity among dealers. It is very clear and perfect, and we do not think it can be excelled in quality by manufactories anywhere.

Attention, Voters.

The attention of all voters not yet assessed is called to the fact that next Thursday, September 6, is the last day for registration and assessment. The registration assessors for this Borough are John I. Rankin, North ward; Eugene Bradley, South ward; Augustus H. Cox, West ward. Application can be made to them any day before Thursday of this week, but on Wednesday and Thursday they are required by law to be at the Court House from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. and from 6 p. m. to 9 p. m. for the purpose of correcting and completing the lists. Parties in this borough desiring to be registered will please call upon these assessors at the commissioner's office. The assessors for the other boroughs and townships will sit during the same hours at the respective voting houses in their several districts.

—The funeral of little Ellen Fauble, daughter of Mr. Amos Fauble, occurred on Sunday morning. There were services at the residence on Bishop street and then the funeral cortege wended its way to the Hebrew burial ground which is located between this place and Roopsburg. The procession was plainly visible from town as it moved slowly over the hill along Willow Bank street. Arriving at the open grave, services were read by Mr. Lyon after which each of the male relatives, beginning with the father and being succeeded by the sons in the order of their ages, dropped three shovelfuls of earth upon the coffin, thus concluding a touching and impressive service.

—While Judge Smith presents an awe-inspiring appearance on the bench we don't believe he is quite the equal of Christian Dale, Sr., in this particular. Suppose Mr D. be invited to occupy the seat on the right of Judge Orvis (Judge S. is seated on his left) and then let the attendants at court determine which of these two they prefer to have occupy that position permanently.

What We Would Do.

If we were worth a million, like Dan. Hastings, Cy. Weaver, John Sourbeck, and some other heavy men up town, we'd make better use of it than they do. At least we feel that way to-day. Among other things.

We'd have apple pie for dinner twice a week and chicken salad on Sunday.

We'd have a suit of clothes for everyday life and a suit for Sunday—also a law suit occasionally for amusement.

We'd buy up all the opera houses in town and charge "Uncle Tom's Cabin" troupes $100 per night for the use of one. If that didn't keep them out of town, we'd go up on Pt. McCoy and jump off.

We'd shoot every cow or hog that showed itself in our garden, and then pay for them—if we had to.

We'd "stuff" the borough legislature into passing an ordinance making it an offense, punishable by fine, for a dude to appear on the streets between the hours of 5 a. m. and 9 p. m.

We'd advance the necessary funds for some energetic chap to open a fish and oyster market.

We'd buy a steam calliope for our friend Beck, the barber man.

We'd adopt Jno. Miller and give him a position as book-reviewer, with the privilege of throwing up his job in case of marriage.

We'd buy George Whippo a pair of boots and a plug hat and send him to Sunday school.

We'd uniform the Eureka base ball nine and then hire the Chicagos to call around and take a few lessons in scientific ball tossing.

We'd open a "barrel" and run for the presidency in '84, on a cash platform.

We'd buy the Buffalo Run railroad and pile it up in our back yard. Railroads are going to be high some day.

We'd take Joe. Furey to Saratoga for the balance of the season, and sleep in the same hotel with Vanderbilt.

There are several other things we might do, which we will mention later

—The Huntingdon correspondent of the Altoona Tribune refers as follows to a certain enjoyable occasion which is of some interest to the people of Centre county: The banquet to Judge Orvis, of Bellefonte, by the members of the Huntingdon bar, given at the Leister house on Thursday, August 23, was a most enjoyable affair. The flowing wit and sparkling champagne, together with the general excellence of the banquet, detained those present until an early hour in the morning. Among the toasts given was one to the English bar, responded to by R. M. Shoffner, Esq., who had just returned from a European tour. Hon. John M. Bailey, of this place, acted as master of ceremonies. Letters of regret were received from Hon. John Dean, Hon. John W. Simonton and others.

"Who Owned Those Birds?"

We have received the following rhyme which is written on a subject that will call to remembrance certain incidents in the lives of at least two of Bellefonte's well known hunters. We celebrate the opening of the hunting season by publishing it:

At Pleasant Gap, some years ago—
'Twas near the time for falling snow—
Two huntsmen through the woods did stroll,
Viewing every nook and knoll,
In search of game, but found none there;
They saw not e'en a "hide nor hair."

As weary from the forest they
Now sauntered on their homeward way,
A chicken from the bushes ran,
When, quick as thought, the China-man,
With true, unerring, steady aim,
Brought down this fat domestic game.
The China-man's companion, too,
Shot at a chicken as it flew.
How long it took I cannot say,
But yet I know they banged away
Till five dead chickens round them lay.

"Good evening, gents, what luck to-day?"
They clearly heard a stranger say.
Though spoke the stranger mild and shy,
They saw the devil in his eye,
And timidly, in measured words,
Asked of the man, 'Who owned those birds?"
The stranger answered bold and free,
"Those birds you've got belong to me."
"Great Scott!" the China man replied,
Meanwhile his friend the chickens eyed.
Said he, "Do not e pos this shine,
And I will prove your Valentine,
And pay you for the chickens there;
Now how much are they worth a pair?"
"As chickens have gone up, you see,
'Dollar a piece is what they'll be;"
Said the man in a manner dry,
Looking them squarely in the eye.

The sum was tendered in a trice,
For well they knew he'd have his price.
They bid the man a kind good-day,
And in their buggy drove away.
Now, for this man I wish to say
Good faith he's kept until to day,
Their secret would have yet been kept
But for a "pot hunter" who crept
Into some bushes standing near,
With silent step and open ear,
And heard them bargain there the while,
And saw their chickens in a pile.

POT HUNTER.

Court Topics.

John Burke and Michael Depre have been sentenced—Depre to six months and Burke to four months imprisonment. Burke plead guilty to stealing a watch and Depre was convicted of receiving stolen goods.

In the case of Commonwealth vs. John P. Lucas the jury rendered a verdict of not guilty, the prosecutrix to pay two thirds of the cost and the defendant one third.

Commonwealth vs. Chas. Smith, colored, charged with larceny. Defendant was acquitted by the jury, because the Commonwealth failed to show that he, being under 14 years of age, was capable of committing crime.

Charles Powell, colored, plead guilty to the charge of assault and battery. Sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and cost of prosecution.

Commonwealth vs. Al. Bowers, uncoupling cars. Plead guilty. Sentence suspended so long as he does not commit any offense against the Pennsylvania Railroad and conducts himself as a good citizen. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $10, costs of prosecution, and imprisonment for 30 days for horsewhipping his wife.

Court adjourned Thursday morning.

—A sensation that almost partakes of the nature of a scandal is disturbing the usual quiet of Scotia. A full grown Anglo-Saxon, who had heretofore been supposed to be in the full possession of sound common sense, has commenced to pay attention to an ebony daughter of Ethiopia's sunny soil. The threatened mesalliance is so disagreeable to the people of that section that tar and feathers are among the possibilities and the railroad might be deprived of one of its employes.

—Ice and watermelon mixed with whiskey will render it non-intoxicating.

THE DANGER OF OVER-EXERTION.

A STALWART MAN BECOMES WEAKER THAN A CHILD AND THEN RECOVERS HIS FORMER STRENGTH.

Waterloo, N. Y., Observer.

In these days of rowing giants and athletic heroes fine physical development is more observed than ever before since the time of the Athenian games. A man who shows the elements of physical power is looked up to far more than in the days of our ancestors possibly because there are fewer specimens of well-developed manhood than then. An emissary of this paper met a magnificent specimen of physical power a few days since in the person of Dr. A. W. McNames, of Waterloo. His muscles, which showed unusual development, were as hard as wood. At his request the writer sought to pinch him in the arms or legs, but found it wholly impossible. A realization of what is meant by an iron man was fully made manifest.

"Have you always been so stalwart as this?" inquired the news gatherer.

"Not by any means," was the reply. "When a young man I was always strong and active and felt that I could accomplish anything. This feeling so took possession of me on one occasion that I attempted to lift a box which four men found it impossible to move. I succeeded in placing it on the wagon, but in two minutes from that time I was unconscious and remained so for hours and when I recovered consciousness I vomited a large quantity of blood. From that day I began to grow weak and sickly. I believed that I had suffered some internal injury and experienced a general debility, which seemed similar to the effects produced by malaria. My back was very weak. I had no appetite, and at times loathed food. My lips were parched and cracked. My head felt as though it were entirely open at the top and it pained me on the side intensely. In six weeks' time I had fallen away from 208 pounds to less than 170. I was in a most wretched condition. I was completely discouraged."

"What did the doctors say about you?"

"Almost everything. I consulted no less than six different physicians. They all treated me and none did me any good. At that time I was suffering intensely. I could not sit upright but was obliged to rest in a cramped, uneasy position. I was compelled to urinate every five minutes and I passed over three quarts every day. I was not living, I was existing.

"One night (how well I remember it!) my wife had put the children all in bed when the feeling came over me that I should live but a very short time. My wife and I talked matters all over and I gave the minutest directions as to what she should do after I was gone. I was not in a flighty condition by any means, for the doctor, on leaving town the day following, bade me good bye, saying he never expected to see me again, for I was suffering with Bright's disease of the kidneys in its last stages. Within the next few days more than twenty friends came to bid me good bye. Among the number was Dr. John L. Clark. He asked me what I had used in the way of medicines. I told him. He then recommended a remedy of which I had heard much, but about which I was very skeptical. If faith were an element of power it certainly was lacking in my case."

"And so you did not try it?"

"On the contrary, I did try it, and to my surprise it seemed to go to just the spot. Indeed, it was the most palatable thing I had taken into my mouth for months. I relished it."

"And did it cure you?"

"Do I look as if it did?"

"Yes, indeed. What was it?"

"Warner's Safe Cure."

"A proprietary medicine!"

"Of course. What of that? I suppose I once had as great a prejudice against advertised medicines as any one could have. When I was studying medicine at Ann Arbor, Michigan, I used to vow with the rest of the class that we would fight all such remedies at all times. When a man comes down to the last hour, however, and bids his wife and friends good bye, such bigoted prejudices as these all vanish, I can assure you and any remedy that can cure is gladly welcomed."

"And how have you been since then?"

"As well—or better than before."

"Do you still exert your strength?"

"Certainly. But I do not over-exert, as formerly. My strength is increasing every day, and my health is number one. I know that my life was saved by Warner's Safe Cure, and I believe it is the best medicine that was ever compounded by any chemist or physician. I am willing the doctors should sneer at me for such a statement if they choose, but I have proven its truth, and am prepared to stand by it."

"The above experience should be of great value to all who are suffering. It shows the deceptive nature of this terrible malady; that all symptoms are common to it and that there is but one way by which it can be absolutely avoided.

The Sportsman's Hand-book Free.

Before starting on his autumn hunting or fishing expedition the wise sportsman will do well to consult the pages of "A Paradise for Gunners and Anglers," a neat and handy publication, recently issued by the Passenger Department of the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad. This little pamphlet finds the sportsman's paradise in the Maryland and Delaware Peninsula, and that section is exhaustively treated with regard to its hunting and fishing resources. Not only are all its birds and fishes discussed and described, but their habits are descanted upon and their haunts disclosed. Valuable hints are also given as to the time and manner when angler or gunner may work with the best success; and explicit directions as to routes and stopping places, accompanied by an excellent map of the section, renders the work a complete guide book. The book is handsomely illustrated with plates of the principal species of game, and is arranged so as to be carried in the pocket with convenience. Such a guide book to a district so rich in birds, water fowl, and fish must prove an invaluable prize to the sportsman.

Copies may be procured, free of charge, by addressing James R. Wood, General Passenger Agent, Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad, Philadelphia, Pa.

We have just received our new Fall and Winter Woolens Call and leave your order. MONTGOMERY & Co., Tailors.

—We have not seen a fine peach this year, but some of the plums are very delicious.

—Admirers of base ball should go to Harry Teats & Co.'s store for groceries.

—The Grand Army of the Republic, 10,000 strong, have decided to hold the encampment next summer in this place.

—Did you ever try Sechler's groceries? If not, do so at once.

—If the Pennsylvania Reserves are going to visit Bellefonte this year they should soon put in appearance or our reserve supply of patience will be exhausted.

—This is the time to buy groceries at Hary Teats & Co.'s store.

—The Bush House will probably be one of the first buildings in Bellefonte to introduce the electric light.

—Harry Teats & Co.'s store is stocked from end to end with fine, fresh groceries.

—A small colored lad named Pennington, who had been ill for some time, died on Friday morning.

—Wise men buy groceries of Sechler.

—A wicked young man says that he never will, under any condition whatever, really believe that a pretty girl knows what a kiss means until he has it from her own mouth.

—Large crowds are attracted to Harry Teats & Co.'s store daily for groceries.

—One more victory perched on the banners of the Eurekas on Saturday afternoon, another game being played with the Milesburg nine on the Fair ground. But it was mere boy's play for the Eurekas, and the game was so poorly contested that it is not worth reporting. The scores were 40 to 15 in favor of the home nine.

—Oscar Wilde's play, "Vera," is a theatrical wreck, although Oscar didn't lose anything by it. It is said the critics killed it and there are prominent actors who commend the drama highly. But all competent judges agree that Sechler's grocery store in the Bush House block is the best place to trade, and the people agree with them by crowding to the store every day.

—Now you have a chance to pay small debts to your creditors residing in San Francisco. The postal notes which go into operation to-day will carry any amount less than $5.

—The Howe Sewing Machine works were recently destroyed by fire, but this will not prevent the continued manufacture of this popular machine, as arrangements to continue their construction are in progress. By the first of December enough machines to supply the trade will be ready for delivery. Consult A. C. Moore, agent for the company at Milesburg.

—"It seems to me that the lard is diminishing, rapidly, Mary," said the mistress to the servant girl. "Yes'm," was the reply of the maid; "but then you knew when you bought it that it was short'ning." The reply of Mary was considered so witty by the mistress that she soon said: "Well, Mary, hurry to Sechler's store for some more lard, and while you're about it just buy some coffee, tea, spices, sugar, etc., enough to last until next Monday." Mary assented and tripped lightly away.

A Steamboat Explosion.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—The steamboat Riverdale started up the Hudson on her trip to Haverstraw at 3 p. m., to-day with fifty passengers on board, from the foot of Harrison street. When opposite the foot of Thirteenth street her boilers exploded. Eye witnesses on shore saw what seemed to be the whole of the inside of the vessel fly into the air with a great report like a discharge of a cannon. The shell of the hull careened over but continued up stream from the momentum of its own speed until it went down bow first at the foot of Fifteenth street. A number of the passengers seized life preservers and jumping over rails into the river were picked up by a number of tug boats that immediately put out from the New York and Jersey shores to their assistance.

LATER.—Accounts of the number of passengers on board vary from 50 to 200, and of the killed from 10 to 50. The most trustworthy accounts place the number killed at from 3 to 6. There is reason to believe that most all had a chance to escape. The engineer was about to enter the engine room to slow up as another steamboat was at their landing.

Following is a list of those known to be killed: Mrs. Julia Sisson, aged 38 years, of Tarrytown; Thomas Gregg, aged 82, of 608 Water street, this city. John Crevet, a fireman, is missing and is believed to be killed. It is feared that others who have not yet been reported were also lost, but their number is not believed to be large. The injured are George A. Deymes, aged 24, a fireman, fatally; Orville Gardner, ex-pugilist and the evangelist, badly scalded, not thought to be fatally injured; Thomas J. Sauls, aged 36, of Brooklyn, scalded; Nicholas Solair, aged 46, mate, right thigh broken; William P. Henry, aged 18 years, oilor; Israel Lazarus, deck hand; James Taber, Nelson McGee, pilot, and John Marar, none of them fatally.

Oil Works Consumed by Fire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—This afternoon a large still containing several thousand gallons of oil exploded in the South Brooklyn oil works at the foot of Huntington street, Brooklyn. The burning oil ran in every direction and the workmen fled in terror. John Reynolds, an old man, was overtaken and it is believed fatally burned. Joseph Dennis was burned about the face and Michael Cevanaugh about the body. Samuel Love, a fireman, was thrown from his engine on its way to the fire and severly injured about the head. Before the firemen arrived another still exploded setting fire to the entire works, and the flames continued to spread until the buildings were in ruins. The works were owned by Byrne, Schrimser & Co. Their loss is about $60,060. Hardly had the firemen returned to their engine house when another alarm called them out again. It had been discovered that the sparks from the oil works had ignited the sulphur works of Daniel Gray, at Ninth street and Gowan's canal, and before the flames were extinguished damage estimated at $25,000 had been caused to the sulphur works.

In Camp at Gettysburg.

GETTSYBURG, Pa., Aug. 28.—The Grand Army of the Republic state encampment continues thronged. Several thousand excursionists arrived on special trains from Chambersburg, Marietta and intermediate points during the day. This afternoon there was a joint reunion of the Twenty-eighth and One Hundred and Forty-seventy regiments, Pennsylvania volunteers and Knapp's battery. A business meeting was held in the court house at 2 p. m. Officers were elected and it was decided to hold the next reunion here and to erect three tablets, marking positions on the battle field. The meeting adjourned to Culp's hill where an address was delivered by Captain J. A. Lombard, editor of the Selinsgrove Tribune. In the evening there was a banquet at the Eagle hotel at which J. S. Carnett, editor of Grand Army Scout, was speaker. A camp dress parade was viewed by a large crowd.

Driven to Suicide by a Woman.

OIL CITY, Pa., Aug. 27.—After taking a heavy dose of chloral last Saturday night Thomas Watson, a young man, aged about 25 years, brother of the general manager of the Buffalo, New York and Philadelphia Railroad, retired to his room and aimed a bullet at his heart. It lodged a little above the mark. His recovery is extremely doubtful. He took this means of ridding himself of a woman of whose society he had tired and who has been bleeding him of all the money he could secure.

Fell and Fractured His Skull.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Aug. 27.—Byson Chaney, a young man, living with his father on Mifflin street, fell from the front door to-day, striking his head on the pavement and fracturing his skull. His injuries are pronounced fatal by the physicians. He has several times complained of vertigo, and it is supposed that an attack of the kind was the cause of his fall.

Is Miss Couzins Dead?

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 26.—Phebe Couzins, the woman's rights lecturer, who has been working with Elizabeth Cady Stanton and other woman suffragists, is reported among the lost in the late cyclone in Minnesota. Miss Couzins' parents reside here and until Tuesday last they heard from her daily. Upon that day she left Kasson, Minn., and started for Mantonville, since when all trace of her has disappeared. The country traversed by her that day was the scene of the late cyclone. As no news has been heard of Miss Couzins since then it is thought she was among the killed. Her father has telegraphed to all available points, but can find no trace of his daughter. Miss Couzins was to join the Redpath Literary Bureau in Chicago next month, but of late was lecturing under her own management. This was not her first trip to the West. Last winter, with Mrs. Stanton, she went to Omaha to aid the woman suffragists in the memorable campaign in which the women made such a good fight for suffrage. Although unsuccessful, Miss Couzins, for her unceasing work, received from the citizens of Omaha a gold medal. She was known, not only in this country, but in Europe, as one of the hardest workers in the cause of woman suffrage, and although a very young woman in years in debate she ranked with Mrs. Stanton and Susan B Anthony and was esteemed their peer as an organizer and public lecturer.

News from the President.

UPPER GEYSER BASIN, Yellowstone National Park, Aug. 24.—At 1 o'clock to day, after a dusty march of twenty-six miles over a rough trail, the president and party arrived in the Upper Geyser Basin of the National park and went into camp near an old, faithful geyser who greeted the travelers a few minutes after dismounting with one of his hourly eruptions. All were very tired and hungry and the exhibition that seemed specially to greet the chief magistrate could induce but few of the party to abandon the lunch and rush to the point for the observation of the display. The afternoon was devoted to resting, bathing and overhauling the outfit, and little attention was paid to the geysers beyond those in the immediate vicinity of the camp. All the travelers were impressed with the wonders surrounding them and to-morrow will no doubt prove a day of interest and pleasure. After their ride on horseback of 230 miles every member of the expedition is in the best of health, and not an accident of the slightest character has occurred on the whole journey to mar its pleasure.

Hanged by Vigilantes.

PARK CITY, Utah, Aug. 26.—At a late hour last night a number of masked men stopped Engineer Thomas, Roadmaster Hughes and a fireman in the employ of the Utah Eastern Railroad Company and compelled them to return to the shops, and, taking an engine and a caboose, ran about thirty masked men to Coalville, some twenty miles distant Leaving a number of men in charge of the train, the vigilantes proceeded to the County Jail. Bringing their guns to bear on the officials they obtained control of the jail, and after taking a man named Jack Murphy from his cell returned to the train and ordered an immediate return to Park City. Upon arriving here the vigilantes took Murphy and hung him to a telegraph pole near the station, the body being viewed by a number of passengers on the early train. Murphy was arrested on suspicion of having shot Brennan last Wednesday and was awaiting trial.

In Camp at Gettysburg.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., August 27.—There was an increased attendance at Camp Geary to-day. During the morning the Eighty-eighth regiment, Pennsylvania volunteer, dedicated three tablets. One was in Zeigler's grove near the Taneytown road, one where General Hancock was wounded and one on Seminary ridge. General George W. Gill, of Camden, N. J., delivered addresses. The ninety-first of Pennsylvania Volunteers dedicated a monument on Little Round Top near where Generals Weed and Vincent fell. Joseph Sinex, who commanded the regiment during the engagement, delivered an address. This afternoon the Seventy-second Pennsylvania volunteers unveiled a monument. General Alexander S. Webb was speaker. About seventy survivors of the regiment were present. The weather during the day has been delightful.

A $10,000 Fire at Columbia.

LANCASTER, Pa., Aug. 27.—Two large barns and a corn shed at Third and Commerce streets, Columbia, property of the Heise and Essick estates, were destroyed by fire this afternoon with their contents. It looked at one time as though the entire square would be swept away. The fire orginated from a portable engine which set fire to a load of wheat and then communicated to the buildings. Loss $10,000; partially covered by insurance.

Thirteen Egyptians Sentenced to Death.

ALEXANDRIA, Aug. 28.—The court-martial which has been trying the soldiers who participated in the massacres here last year has sentenced thirteen culprits, who were charged with having organized the massacres, to be hanged opposite the police station, and two to fourteen years and six to five years penal servitude.

Can't be Cured!

Who says so? "The best physicians have been consulted and they all agree that the case is beyond the reach of medicine." Have you tried the new Vitalizing Treatment, which acts directly upon the great nerve centres and gives to all the vital organs a new life force and a higher activity? "No; never heard of it. What is it called?" Compound Oxygen. "Oh! yes, I have seen it advertised, but supposed it was one of the medical humbugs of the day." If all that we have read about the cures it is making is true, it is the most wonderful therapeutic agent ever discovered. "Where can it be obtained?" Only of Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1109 Girard street, Philadelphia. Now, take our advice and write to them, giving a statement of your condition. You will get a prompt answer, and it will cost you nothing, as they make no charge for consultation. If, like your physicians, they see no hope in your case they will honestly tell you so. But if they have treated similar cases successfully, they will, in making a favorable report, send such evidence of their professional integrity and skill, and such reports of cases which they have treated as can hardly fail to give you confidence both in them and their new and wonderful treatment.

Mr. Wolohin, of Albany, Fla., set a hen on hen's eggs. Mr. Wolohin lifted her up the other day and found her keeping warm three young kittens, a powder guard and a door knob and he's putting in his time now in wondering how it occurred, instead of laying for the neighbor's boy.

Nervousness.

The moment there is danger of impairment of the mind from excessive nervous exhaustion, or where there exists forebodings of evil, a desire for solitude, shunning and avoiding company, vertigo and nervous debility, or when insanity has already taken place, Peruna and Manalin should be implicitly relied on. But it is never well to wait so long before treatment is commenced. The early symptoms are loss of strength, softness of the muscles, dim or weak sight, peculiar expression of the face and eyes, coated tongue, with impaired digestion; or in others, certain powers only are lost, while they are otherwise enjoying comparatively good health. In all these Peruna and Manalin should at once be taken.

"You don't feel well, do you, Henry?" asked Fogg. "Why, yes I do," replied Henry; "what put that idea into your head?" "I thought," said Fogg, toying with Henry's watch-chain, "that you looked a little sick at the stomach."

PUFFERY.—Nothing can be more offensive to conscientious journalism than indiscriminute puffery. But it is a pleasure to speak candidly and correctly in praise of such a medicine as Hunt's Remedy for the kidneys, bladder, liver and urinary organs; a specific and positive cure that has been before the public for twenty-five years, has rescued from suffering and the grave even the victims of Bright's disease. The facts in regard to Hunt's Remedy, the great kidney and liver medicine, are attested by high authority.

Opinion of Dr. Mott, late Government Chemist, on Allcock's Porous Plaster.

My investigation of ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER shows it to contain valuable and essential ingredients not found in any other plaster. These ingredients are so perfectly proportioned that the Allcock's Porous Plaster will not cause blisters or excessive irritation, and I find it superior to and more efficient than any other plaster.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth! If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. 15 22 1y

"I am the power behind the thrown," soliloquized the mule, as he pitched his rider heels over head to the ground.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning? The signal, perhaps, of the sure approach of that more terrible disease, consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cents to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a million bottles were sold the past year. It relieves Croup and Whooping Cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. For lame back, side or chest use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. For sale by John Harris.

If and If.

"If you are suffering from poor 'health or languishing on a bed of 'sickness, take cheer, if you are 'simply ailing, or if you feel weak 'and dispirited, without clearly 'knowing why, Hop Bitters will 'surely cure you."

"If you are a minister, and have 'overtaxed yourself with your pastoral duties, or a mother, worn out with 'care and work, or a man of business 'or labor weakened by the strain of 'your everyday duties, or a man of letters, toiling over your midnight work, 'Hop Bitters will surely strengthen 'you."

"If you are suffering from 'over-eating or drinking, any 'indiscretion or dissipation, or 'are young and growing too 'fast, as is often the case,"

"Or if you are in the workshop, on 'the farm, at the desk, anywhere, and 'feel that your system needs cleansing, 'toning or stimulating, without intoxicating, if you are old, blood thin and 'impure, pulse feeble, nerves unsteady, 'faculties waning, Hop Bitters is what 'you need to give you new life, health 'and vigor."

If you are costive or dyspeptic, or suffering from any other of the numerous diseases of the stomach or bowels, it is your own fault if you are ill.

If you are wasting away with any form of kidney disease, stop tempting death this moment, and turn for a cure to Hop Bitters.

If you are sick with that terrible sickness, nervousness, you will find a "Balm in Gilead" in Hop Bitters.

If you are a frequenter or a resident of a miasmatic district, barricade your system against the scourge of all countries—malaria, epidemic, bilious and intermittent fevers—by the use of Hop Bitters.

If you have rough, pimply or sallow skin, bad breath, Hop Bitters will give you fair skin, rich blood, the sweetest breath, and health. $500 will be paid for a case they will not cure or help.

That poor, bed-ridden, invalid, wife, sister, mother, or daughter, can be made the picture of health by a few bottles of Hop Bitters, costing but a trifle. 15 9-1y

—The Eureka base ball club received a challenge from the newly organized nine at Philipsburg to play them in the latter place last week. The challenge promises that the expenses of the Eurekas should be paid. As certain members of the Eureka nine cannot spare the time which the visit to Philipsburg would make necessary the challenge was not accepted.

—In speaking of the fire at Williamsport on Monday evening, Aug. 27, the L. H. Journal says: "At Bellefonte, more than fifty miles away, the people saw the reflection and supposed Lock Haven was suffering." We do not think that many people in Bellefonte entertained that harrowing supposition as it was known here at an early hour that a fire was raging in Williamsport.

—The ideal of reform as exemplified by the Democratic legislature is to reduce the cost of advertising for stationery from $10,000 to $1500, and to discharge several women who have no votes and maintain themselves by scrubbing, and then to draw $300,000 extra pay for services not rendered. The first "reform" is well enough, but, the discharge of the poor, voteless scrub women—well, if that be reform save us from it.

—A Centre Hall man sold a team of horses to a stranger a day or two since for $375.00, taking his check for that amount on a Lewisburg bank. On presenting the same at the bank for payment he was told that the gentleman who drew the check had no deposit there, and was unknown to the bank officials. He is evidently a sharper, and the Centre Haller is a poorer but wiser man than he was a week ago. Nothing has yet been heard of the man or the horses.

OH! LOVELY DEMOCRACY!

A Mass Meeting on Tuesday Evening—Five Speakers, Three Bands, but not Much Enthusiasm.

The Court House was well filled on Tuesday evening of last week. County Chairman Heinle moved that Adam Hoy, Esq., be made chairman of the meeting, which was agreed to. Mr. Hoy mounted the rostrum, and after announcing the astounding information that the Democratic party was old and growing older he said that he was ready for a motion.

D. F. Fortney, Esq., instantly "moved" from his seat and read a list of about fifty names for vice presidents and four or five secretaries whom he nominated, their nomination being agreed to by several boys in the rear of the room.

Then President Hoy said that W. U. Hensel, Chairman of the State Central Committee, would address the meeting. When he stood before the audience it was easy to perceive that he is the same old coon he was last year. He looks like a prize-fighter and talks as volubly as a book agent. Some portions of his speech reflected severely on the Democrats. For illustration, in enumerating instances in which actual economy had been exhibited by the present Legislature over preceding ones he could only mention two—one, the item of advertising for bids to supply stationery; the other—the humorous side of which has already been ventilated—Meek's valliant effort to discharge all the scrub-women in the Legislature. He showed how Democrats will oppress the poor for the sake of reaping a little glory for themselves. He endeavored to show that the advent of the Democrats to power had not impeded business and enterprise, but could not do so satisfactorily. His explanation of the long-drawn-out $300,000 Legislature was likewise a lamentable failure.

Well, Mr. Hensel at length yielded the floor to a gentleman who is popular with Centre county audiences of all and no political parties—Congressman A. G. Curtin. But that respected gentleman seems so utterly out of place addressing an audience of unwashed Democracy that we could sympathize with him. However, he let politics severely alone. It was plainly evident that he disapproves of the long session at Harrisburg and told the audience that political transgression is not all confined to the State Capital, Washington City having its full proportion. He predicts that next year's political fight will be the greatest on record. Tilden is now in training to fight Sullivan, and if Governor Curtin feels as good one year hence as he does now he will undertake to knock out Tug Wilson.

Following the Governor J. L. Spangler, D. F. Fortney and W. C. Heinle flashed up and disappeared in rapid succession. Spangler gave Hensel some taffy which almost made him ill considering the high temperature; Fortney uttered a red, white and blue sentiment about the apportionment, and Heinle—well, he almost drowned his own voice. After music by the band adjournment followed.

The music deserves special mention. The Zion band performed a difficult composition quite artistically, the Pleasant Gap band gave forth a full volume of sound while the Citizens' Cornet Band of Milesburg played very sweetly and excellently. Such delicious music as the medley which was the concluding performance is endurable even from a full band in a room of ordinary size.

Leonard Rhoue, master of the State Grange, was present to hear Hensel, who has more than once underrated the agriculture of Centre county, thus reflecting on the Grange.

Judge Orvis, John A. Woodward and many other worthies were present.

Altogether it was quite as acceptable an entertainment as any more appearances of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" could possibly be. Try it again.

Crop Notes.

No sound, fine apples have appeared in market this season, and we conclude from what the farmers say that there will be none. The crop is almost a failure.

Early peaches have also proved to be a hollow mockery, but it is probable that those which mature later will be better.

Quinces do not develop. Blossoms were abundant and small quinces hang from every branch, but they will not develop into the proportions of half a crop.

As we have heard no complaint about grapes we conclude that the yield will be from middling to fair. We transpose the words advisedly, because we think "from fair to middling" is the wrong way to express it.

Potatoes are decaying rapidly because of too much rain. The "Early Rose" seems to be the worst sufferer, though some others are almost as bad. The later varieties may do better.

Clover is also the victim of misfortune. Some little, pink, wiggling creature, that resembles a worm, may be found in every head, preventing the appearance of a blossom and consequently destroying the seed. We examined a dozen or more of them through a microscope the other day, but cannot tell our readers how to get rid of them. Who can?

Corn? Oh, well, this cereal had a hard "row to hoe" early in the season, but has since done much to improve itself.

We are glad to quote an exception to this general average of crop failures. Wheat has excelled itself this year. The yield in some places hereabouts has been magnificent.

The Flouring Mill of Wm. H. Long & Co. at Howard—Recent Improvements.

MR. EDITOR: A man, before entering a first-class flouring mill, should provide himself with a well-starched suit of white linen clothing. The surface of the material should be slippery enough to stand a fly on its head the instant the two come in contact. Such, at least, was my freely expressed opinion after I had traveled through the length and breadth of the famous old flouring mill located at the foot of Gordon street, in Howard, owned and operated by Mr. Conrad Long. You may not see the minute specks of flour floating through the air, but nevertheless they are there, and you become sorrowfully aware of their presence when they collect on your coat, vest, pants, hats, boots, moustache, eyelashes and eyebrows. Turn your pockets inside-out and you will find them there. If you remain in the mill long enough they may penetrete even inside your watch. This information is given by way of introduction, for the benefit of those who might thoughtlessly enter a flouring mill with their funeral clothes on.

Having learned that Mr. Conrad Long had been making very extensive and expensive improvements in his large, four story brick flouring mill at Howard, the writer concluded to visit the establishment. He discovered that the report was more than true. The improvements rendar it one of the best mills within a radius of one hundred miles. Our inspection of the transformation which has taken place proved satisfactory, excepting, of course, the unwelcome intimacy of stray flour before alluded to.

The mill was closed for repairs on the 8th day of June and again resumed operations on the 20th of July. It has since been conducted under the celebrated Stephens' roller system, which manufactures flour that has no superior. Plans for the remodeling of the structure were provided by the John F. Noyes Manufacturing Company. The work was done under the superintendence of Mr. John Moore, of Lockport, N. Y., and Mr. Mesh Williams, of Martha, this county. It is supplied with one Rounds' sectional roller with Stephens' corrugations, beside double and single Stephens. Power is furnished by the Reliance water wheel, but owing to recent scarcity of water and many orders a Blandy engine has been added.

The first floor is used for packing flour and storage purposes. The second floor is where the grinding is done and where the rolls are situated, which are driven by a line shaft on the first floor. Just above this, on the third floor, may be found the bolting machines of two reels and four conveyors each, and a Smith's purifier and cleaning machinery. The fourth and highest story is occupied by storage bins, etc. While different grades of flour can be manufactured the proprietors expect to manufacture only one grade of uniform excellence. The average capacity of the mill—fifty barrels in every 24 hours—can be exceeded when necessary.

Until recently Mr. Conrad Long was the sole proprietor, but wishing to be relieved of some of the business, his son, William, has come into the partnership. The business will hereafter be conducted under the name, style and title of Wm. H. Long, & Co. William Long, who is affable and pleasant, will receive orders. He will be assisted in the superintendence of the practical work by Wm. Strunk, who has made milling his study for the past twenty years. Mr. John Long, a younger brother, is engineer and John Hasgan drives the mill team.

Yours, "OLD DUSTY."

—The beautiful iron balcony has been put in position by Hicks & Griffith in front of Mr. Bush's Arcade building and reflects much credit upon the builders as well as on the owner of the building. Many expressions of admiration in reference to the improved appearance of the structure are heard from those who pass along that part of High street.

Bright Colors for Autumn.

An authority in the latest styles of ladies' apparel says that it is evident that there is to be no toning down in the coming season; everything that is shown is bright with color and as decided as could be wished. Among the more prominent of the colors that are already shown as especially suitable to the approaching season, and those which will be the first choice for early autumn wear, are the various shades of gray, some of which have blue tinges; others are of a pure silver shade, while others are mixtures of black or brown with white. Steel gray, with its bluish tone, which was once so popular, is revived again, and will be a favorite color this season, being, in fact, all the grays. Following closely after this comes the iron gray, then the smoke gray with its brown tone, and the granite or pure stone color; turtle dove is also another favorite shade of gray, and is shown in the new materials for both dresses and bonnets.

After this come the browns, blues, greens and copper reds, with the always popular garnet and cardinal shades. The blues are most of them pure and simple shades, sapphire, marine and azure, with some of the electric blues that show a gray ashen tint under that color. There is a fair promise that the young ladies will rival the autumn leaves in the gayety of their appearance.

Great Fire in Williamsport.

An extensive conflagration raged in Williamsport on August 27. A dispatch to the Altoona Tribune says it started in the saw mill of Finley, Young & Co., quickly destroyed it and the flames spread northward destroying the offices of the firm and Merriman & Sons and then entered the lumber yards and burned over a square of ground, destroying a large quantity of lumber piles. At 12 o'clock the fire was still burning but with prospects of soon being subdued. Several dwellings and barns were also burned. It is estimated that from twenty five million to thirty million feet of lumber was burned. The total loss is expected to reach half a million dollars.

The principal losers are Finley, Young & Co., H. Merriman & Sons, Payne, Cochran & Co., Kramer, Mann & Co., and Edgar Munson. The amount of lumber lost by each cannot yet be told. All were insured, every company represented in the city being among the losers. L. Schneider's agency loses $175,000. Engines came from Sunbury, Milton, Lewisburg and Watsontown. The fire was exceedingly stubborn and could not be checked until it reached the limits of the lumber piles. The origin of the fire is not yet known.

—Mr. F. X. Lehman, of the Butts House, went to Bellefontaine, Ohio, on Wednesday, August 22, to accompany his father-in-law, Mr. Windelin Werstein, from that city to Bellefonte. Mr. Werstein just arrived from Baden, Germany, expecting to visit his daughter, Mrs. Lehman, but owing to the similarity of names he found his way to Bellefontaine. But he could not find his daughter in that city. The residents of the city became interested in him, and as he explained that the place he was searching for was near a city named Williamsport he was told that Bellefonte, Pa., answered to that description. Accordingly, telegrams were sent here, but, as fate would have it, the telegrams became mixed, the name of Mr. Lehman, to whom the first was addressed, being spelled so incorrectly that his identity was not recognized. When, at length, a telegram did reach him, it conveyed the information that his father-in-law was ill, which was not true at all. Mrs. Lehman was much concerned about her father's safety and Mr. L. hastened to Bellefontaine. Now, they are safely reunited, and Mr. Werstein, who is about 60 years of age, will probably reside with his daughter henceforth.

—Mr. E. J. Pruner, of Tyrone, who is well known in this place, is now in San Francisco attending the encampment of Knights Templar. He is located at the Occidental Hotel, and we understand that it is his intention to make a complete tour of the Golden State, which, by the way, is no stranger to him as this is not his first visit. We have had the pleasure of inspecting several excellent newspapers published in San Francisco containing full accounts of the encampment, which Mr. Pruner sent to his relatives in this place. They are a sufficient indication of the enterprise which characterizes that portion of our great country.

—The game of base ball at Philipsburg on the 25th, between Tyrone and Philipsburg, ended in a row. The Tyrone nine refused to play the game out on account of the umpire's impartial decisions.

—Look out for the Eurekas' new uniforms.

Dio Lewis.

Dr. Dio Lewis was born at Auburn, N. Y., in 1824, studied medicine with Dr. Briggs, of that city, took his medical course in the Harvard Medical School, Boston, began the practice of his profession in his native place in 1845, and two years later removed to Buffalo, where he practiced from 1847 to 1852. During his residence in Buffalo, he wrote a number of papers on the cause and treatment of cholera, which ravaged that city during 1849 and 1851. These papers attracted much attention, and were afterwards published in book form.

In the autumn of 1852 Dr. Lewis took his young wife, then seriously threatened with consumption, to the South. The visit to the Southern States was repeated during the two following winters.

During these three winters of leisure, Dr. Lewis seriously reconsidered his life-work, and after consultation with family and other trusted friends, resolved to "shift the switch." Since 1855 he has been engaged in lecturing and writing on the subject of public and personal hygiene. With the exception of two visits to Europe and three summers of saddle life in the mountains of California, he has been unceasingly occupied with the "ounce of prevention."

His labors have been varied, interesting and most effective. During four years he lectured almost every night, giving his days to the invention of his new system of gymnastics. In 1860, having completed this system, he abandoned the platform and settled in Boston, Mass., to establish his Normal School for physical training. Obtaining an act of incorporation from the Massachusetts legislature, he placed his scheme before the celebrated Dr. Walter Channing, Dr. Thomas Hoskins and other well known medical men. The two gentlemen named, and others, entered heartily into the work. Dr. Channing and Dr. Hoskins both became active teachers or professors in Dr. Lewis' school. Within seven years more than four hundred persons were graduated from the Boston Normal School, and, bearing its diploma, with the name of Dio Lewis as its President, went out into all the land, teaching the new school of physical training. Among these graduates was that admirable gentleman and scholar, Moses Coit Tyler, now professor in Cornell University. He went abroad, remaining several years in London, introducing the "Dio Lewis gymnastics." Prof. Tyler's lectures and his contributions to the English magazines on the new school of body culture, constitute the finest portion of the literature of the new movement. In one of Prof. Tyler's papers, in a leading English magazine, occurs this paragraph:

"The movement of thought in America toward physical culture is thus organized upon a profound and abiding basis. An impulse has been given which vibrates through a population of twenty millions; this impulse cannot die. . . . And of this vast and beneficial movement Dio Lewis stands clearly at the head. To him the people are looking as to an apostle and guide. He has inaugurated in America a great national reform, as distinct, as influential, as glorious as that which was wrought in Germany by Salzman and Jahn, or in Sweden by the poet and gymnasiarch Ling."

Another interesting phase of Dr. Lewis' work is found in the great seminary which he established at Lexington, Mass.

His object was to illustrate the possibilities in the physical development of girls during their school life. His buildings, accommodating 200 persons, were placed upon the first battle field of the revolutionary war. A large corps of the best teachers in mathematics, sciences, languages, belle lettres and music to be found in the country were engaged and the opening announced. The school soon grew to one hundred and fifty young women, gathered from all parts of the country, including the Pacific coast, Central America and the West Indies. They came to see what could be done by the new method for their nervous, enfeebled bodies. The marvellous triumphs of this institution during the years which Dr. Lewis devoted to its management he gives in the North American Review for December, 1882. As he says in that paper, hundreds of grateful parents are familiar with the facts. Girls who came unable to ascend a single flight of stairs without suffering, in a few months were able to walk five to ten miles without inconvenience.

In the course of his twenty-two years residence in Boston, Dr. Lewis published nine volumes on the various aspects of the health of the human body, some of which, like "Our Girls," "Our Digestion" and "Weak Lungs," have had enormous sales.

Dr. Lewis has now removed to the city of New York to establish a large monthly magazine, to be called "Dio Lewis' Monthly," and to be devoted to sanitary and social science. This will be the crowning work of his long life of labor in the interest of better bodies for American men and women.

—Mr. D. G. Bush lost a valuable cow by death last Thursday. The animal broke into the chop box, and eat so much of the luscious chop that she had to shuffle off this mortal coil.

—Ellen Fauble, an eight-year-old daughter of Mr. Amos Fauble, of Bishop street, died on Thursday evening at 7 o'clock after a brief illness. She was a bright, attractive little girl and will be much missed by her relatives. They may be consoled, however, by the thought that she is safe in a Heavenly Father's care.

—The bogus check man has been caught. Our readers will remember that he gave a $375 check on the Union National Bank of Lewisburg to Mr. H. C. Shirk, of Centre Hall, in exchange for a valuable team of horses. Mr. Van Pelt overtook him in Plymouth, Luzerne county, and he will soon be brought to this place. He gave the name of J. Santee.

—The Ross M. E. church near Gatesburg has recently received very extensive repairs, converting the pretty edifice into an almost entirely new structure. It can be truly said that "from turret to foundation stone" it is resplendent and new, bright as a new pin or a silver trade dollar. Mr. Samuel Ellenbarger had the work in charge and executed it to the complete satisfaction of the congregation.

—One hundred and fifty tons of ore are being shipped daily from Tow Hill ore mines. The mines are splendidly equipped with apparatus which enables the most speedy and satisfactory work to be done. —On Saturday afternoon D. S. Keller, Esq., Revs. J. P. Hughes and John Hewitt, Dr. Geissinger and numerous other gentlemen were on the fair ground to witness the base ball game. There was also quite a large number of ladies. Now, if a really excellent nine could be induced to visit Bellefonte to give the Eurekas a close contest we have no doubt the attendance would be large, as genuine interest in the game has already been aroused.

—Five hundred thousand dollars will not cover the loss to Williamsport by the fire of Monday evening, August 27. A few years ago there was a fire entailing even a larger loss, while fires destroying property valued at a hundred thousand dollars are not considered of much consequence. Fires of some kind occur almost daily. While such losses would paralyze Bellefonte, Williamsport flourishes under them amazingly.

RAILROAD MEETING.

The Stockholders of L., C. and T. R. R. Meet at Centre Hall.

A call which was issued for a meeting of the stockholders of the Lewisburg, Centre and Tyrone R. R., (formerly Lewisburg, Centre and Spruce Creek) at Centre Hall on Thursday at one o'clock p. m., was quite generally responded to by those interested, although the transaction of business did not begin until about 2 o'clock. The scene of the gathering was in the parlor of the hotel. Among the attendants were several distinguished gentlemen from Bellefonte and an equal number from all parts of Penns valley, among whom were President Atherton, of State College, Professor Hamilton, business manager of the College; Christian Dale, Sr., Moses Thompson, John I. Thompson, William Thompson, Daniel Hess and others.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. Gilliland and Hon. Fred Kurtz elected President, George M. Boal being chosen secretary.

President Kurtz stated the object of the meeting which he said was to further the interest of the railroad through Penns valley from Spring Mills, its present terminus, to Lemont. His remarks were exceedingly severe and reflected strongly on the Pennsylvania Railroad because of its dilatoriness in fulfilling its promises to complete the railroad, thereby entailing heavy loss and almost financial ruin upon those who had contributed to it. He stated that $200,000 had been subscribed toward its construction and the residents of the valley had faithfully performed their part; but a decade of years have passed, the work already accomplished has been destroyed and the Pennsylvania railroad has done absolutely nothing. The route is fenced in, the land useless and its existence at present a positive hindrance and detriment.

It was moved and seconded that a committee of five be appointed to draft resolutions expressing the sentiments of the meeting on the question under discussion. The President appointed the committee as follows: Daniel Hess, Leonard Rhone, W. Campbell, John Arney and William Boal.

The committee reported the following preamble and resolutions:

WHEREAS, The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, though its agents at various times, urged upon the people of Pennsvalley to subscribe stock for the grading of the Lewisburg, Centre and Spruce Creek Railroad, agreeing on its part to construct and complete the said road within five years, as stipulated by the charter; and

Whereas, The said company did, through its agents, demand and receive for this purpose from Haines township, $30,000; from Miles township, $20,000; from Penn township, $40,000; from Harris township, $30,000; from Potter township, $40,000, and from Gregg township $40,000, and did, in addition, demand and receive a guarantee of right of way at additional heavy expense to the citizens of the said townships, and has taken possession of valuable farm lands for its road bed, and now for a period of ten years or more, has left said road uncompleted, contrary to its pledges, and after calling from us the stock and taking possession of the land; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the stockholders of said road in Pennsvalley, after submitting to this wrong for over ten years, do hereby request of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company the fulfillment on its part of the stipulations with us by the completion of the Lewisburg and Tyrone R. R., without further delay; which we are entitled to by every principle of honor and justice.

Resolved, That having patiently submitted to a repeated violation of promises in years past, we request the extension of the road aforesaid from Spring Mills, its present terminus, to Lemont, at which point the road has been graded by the people according to contract.

Resolved, That justice and honor demand of the Penn'a R. R. Company prompt action in this request for our road by an early completion of the said road and that a further refusal to do justice to its shareholders is a gross injustice to the people who have fulfilled their part of the contract.

Resolved, That a committee of five stockholders be elected by this meeting to consult with Strickland Kneass, the President of our road, and the Board of Directors of the Pennsylvania railroad company, for an early completion of our road.

Resolved, That the said committee be instructed to report through the press or at another meeting, if deemed necessary, the result of their labors and what further action may be necessary on the part of stockholders and land owners, should this, our appeal for justice, meet with a favorable response from the Penn'a Railroad Company.

Long and earnest discussion on the resolutions followed, the speakers being Ex-Senator Alexander, J. L. Spangler, Esq., Pres. Judge John H. Orvis, Gen. James A. Beaver and Mr. Jas. Milliken. Gen. Beaver reminded the stockholders that some who were controlling spirits in the Penn'a Railroad Company when the L., C. and S. C. R. R. was first projected are now dead and that the Penn'a company have not been petitioned for years past to complete the road. He believed that petition, accompanied with absolute proof of the wealth of Penns Valley, based on the report of a professional geologist, will result in the construction of the road in the near future; that very few officials of the Penn'a company are acquainted with the real wealth of Penns Valley. Senator Alexander's speech also advised discretion and moderation. He said that a demand of the Penn'a company to complete the road would probably be unnoticed while a respectful request would receive consideration and a favorable response. Mr. James Milliken's remarks were also, we think, very appropriate, and if his advice is followed it will result in the building of the road. He has been largely interested in the iron business and so successful in all his enterprises that counsel from him is of inestimable value.

It is certain that our Penns valley friends have been very unjustly dealt with by the Pennsylvania Company, and we hope that the action taken last Thurday will work good results.

A Railroad Meeting at Hublersburg.

The railroad meeting at Hublersburg on Saturday afternoon was largely attended by the property owners of that locality and by several gentlemen from Bellefonte, among the latter being Gen. James A. Beaver, Messrs. Robert and George Valentine, James and Theodore Gordon and L. Shaffer. It resulted in the right of way being secured over about five miles of territory, and there is little doubt that the entire distance, about 21 miles, will be readily given. Another meeting will soon be held at a point in Clinton county near the line and it is also probable that the committee will call one more meeting at Hublersburg.

The above was gleaned Monday morning, but we have since received the minutes of the Secretary, Mr. L. Shaffer, from which we learn that Mr. Kline Zimmerman was elected chairman and Henry Brown and Jacob Dunkle, vice presidents of the meeting. Judge Orvis, being called upon to state the object of the meeting, said that he didn't know it; that he merely accompanied J. L. Spangler, Esq., by the latter's invitation. Mr. Spangler then stated that the object of the meeting was to endeavor to secure the right of way for a railroad through Nittany valley and proceeded to show the advantages which the road would bring to the valley and its people, which he said were increased price of produce, cheaper coal and other necessaries.

Gen. Beaver was then called upon. He was not authorized to say that a road would be built if the right of way were secured, but the proposition to build a railroad through the valley on the simple condition of free right of way was the most generous one ever offered by any company, and cited as corroboratory of his statement the B. E. V. R. R. and L., C. and S. C. R. R., where subscriptions were asked before building the roads. He claimed that every man that owns a dollar's worth of property should use his influence towards securing a free right of way. Rival roads would reduce freight and raise the price of produce. He then took up the printed blank releases and commented on the wording of them, and pointed out how it might be changed so as to secure the proper rights to the persons so releasing.

Judge Orvis compared Nittany and Bald Eagle valleys, and showed that the latter was outstripping the former. He believed that large farms would be benefited and small ones perhaps injured, and a fund should be raised for the benefit of the latter. He subscribed $100 towards such a fund, J. L. Spangler, Esq., and Henry Brown following his example.

Upon motion the old committee was continued to solicit subscriptions and releases. Upon motion, the committee was requested to call a meeting of citizens at Clintondale, in Clinton county.

The following parties signed the release: John L. Rogers, H. C. Snavely, George Grub, Mary Grub, John Grub, Rebecca Tolbert, J. H. Tolbert, James A. Beaver, Frank McCoy, J. D. Shugert, J. D. Gordon, Theodore Gordon, Robert Valentine, George Valentine, Ambrose McMullen, D. F. Shaffer, John Miller, J. C. Zimmerman and L. S. Zimmerman, the latter on condition that the road be finally located along the creek route, which it is believed the railroad company will be willing to do.

—The State Convention of the Y. M. C. A. will meet at York, on Thursday, September 20. Excursion rates have been secured on all leading railroads. Rev. Dr. Julius Grammar, of Baltimore, will address the convention on the first evening.

Banquet to Judge Orvis.

The complimentary dinner tendered to Hon. John H. Orvis Friday evening at the Brockerhoff House by the Centre County Bar Association, in honor of his promotion to the President Judgeship of the 49th judicial district, was a complete success and a highly enjoyable occasion. The banquet was under the charge of Gen. Beaver, Col. Hastings and J. L. Spangler, Esq., gentlemen who have officiated in similar capacities before, and nothing was left undone that could add to the interest of the gathering. The members of the bar and press representatives assembled in the parlors about 8 o'clock and paid their respects to the honorable gentleman. The Judge was in a happy frame of mind and received the congratulations which were showered upon him from all sides in his usual graceful manner. About an hour was devoted to handshaking and social chit-chat, and at nine o'clock the reception committee made the cheerful announcement that the feast of the evening was ready. The guests were formed in line and marched into the dining hall two by two. The room was tastefully decorated for the occasion, and the bountiful supply of eatables under which the tables groaned were arranged in a most artistic and pleasing style. In order that our readers may know what mine host McMillan can do in this line, we apend the

After all had been assigned seats General Beaver assumed the role of master of ceremonies and of course filled that position admirably. Dinner over, letters were read from a number of prominent gentlemen at a distance who were unable to be present. Then came the after-dinner speeches. The toast: "Hon. Jno. H. Orvis—our honored guest," was fittingly responded to by Hon. C. T. Alexander. Judge Orvis was then called upon, and notwithstanding his vest was pretty tight in front, delivered a spicy ten-minute speech. Remarks were also made by Gen. Beaver, Col. D. H. Hastings, James P. Coburn, Adam Hoy, Jno. B. Linn, D. S. Keller, J. L. Spangler, W. C. Heinle and Clement Dale.

Where Governor Curtin Is.

The Altoona Tribune of Friday gives us the following interesting information: "A party of German and English capitalists occupying two special cars attached to first section of Pacific express, passed through the city yesterday morning en route for the far west on a tour of inspection. The party comprises the following gentlemen: Messrs. R. N. McClain, George Stark, Walter Blaine, a son of Hon. James G. Blaine, Mr. Kidder, C. P. Dresser, Mr. Bethall, Baron Bleickrader, an English Lord, A. Ladenburg, Chas. H. Marshall, W. H. Beard, William Beard, John Biglow, N. P. Halloweli, E. M. Dawson, E. M. Paxon, F. McLaughlin, Col. A. K. McClure and W. G. Harding. Ex-Gov. Curtin joined the party at this point, and will accompany them on their tour of inspection over the Northern Pacific railroad. The foreign members of the party arrived in this country on Tuesday, but are only a part of the delegation which came over, the others having gone west by other routes. The object of their visit at this time is to be present at the ceremonies connected with the driving of the last spike of the N. P. railroad, in which they are interested financially. Henry Villiard, president of the Northern Pacific, will drive the spike, a golden one, with a silver hammer. The English and German visitors will do all points of interest in the far west before returning."

—The law requires that the Assessor of each election district be at the place of holding election on Wednesday and Thursday, the 5th and 6th of September, between the hours of ten a. m. and three p. m., and from six p. m., to nine p. m., for the purpose of registering all parties properly entitled to be registered.

Personal Pencilings.

W. A. Brachbill was in Lock Haven on Wednesday.

Miss Long, of Howard, is the guest of Miss Annie Meese.

Mr. Cameron Burnside was at Howard on Tuesday of last week.

Judge Chas. A. Mayer was on the bench last Wednesday morning.

Mr. Victor Maire has returned after two months absence from town.

Mrs. N. Orbison is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Beach, of Baltimore.

Miss Moir, the guest of Miss Jackson, returned to her home last Wednesday.

Miss Minnie Wilkinson departed on Thursday to visit friends in New Jersey.

Edward McIntyre, of this place, has recently been visiting William Rumbarger, of DuBois.

Mr. Henry Iddings, of Unionville, was in town last week serving in the capacity of a grand juror.

Mr. I. V. Gray, of the firm of Gray, Wolf & Co., of Philipsburg, attended court last week as a juror.

Mrs. Bayard Hicks has returned from a visit to Williamsport extending through several weeks.

Mrs. Ellen Furey, of Youngstown, Ohio, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Speer, on West Lamb street.

Miss Sallie V. Watson, of Philadelphia, is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Furst on Linn street.

The Misses Blair, vivacious young ladies of Unionville, greeted their friends in Bellefonte one day last week.

Mr. John A. Woodward, of Howard, was in town last week. His visits in this vicinity have been less frequent of late than formerly.

Rev. Wm. R. Bingham, D. D., of Lincoln University, delivered two admirable sermons in the Presbyterian church on Sunday.

Rev. R. H. Kline, rector of an Episcopal church at Ashland, Pa., is visiting his friends in this county. He is a brother of John Kline, Esq., of this place.

Mrs. Graffius, accompanied by her daughter-in-law, also Mrs. Graffius, both ladies from Tyrone, are guests at the residence of Mrs. Morris Cowdrick on Linn street.

Messrs. George Culp, Richard Winner and several other employes of glass works arrived in town Thursday morning ready to commence operations on last Saturday.

Mrs. Wm. J. Nicolls of Pottstown is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Lyon, on Curtin street. Mr Nicolls, who was in town on Thursday, departed on the 10 o'clock train.

Mr. James Mitchell, of Spring street, who has been a confirmed sufferer from rheumatism in its worst form for several years, is somewhat convalescent, and we hope he may recover entirely.

Miss Ada Underwood, of Shepherdstown, Pa., arrived in Bellefonte on Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock and will spend a few weeks with her friend Miss Edith Harris, of Linn street.

Eddie Richard, son of F. W. Richard, went to Philadelphia on Tuesday morning of last week. Thence he will go to New York City and then to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., to attend a commercial college in the latter place.

Mr. Herman Robb, a well known gentleman who is very popular in Bellefonte, is now in the employ of Mr. J. Sankey, ex-Burgess of Philipsburg. Mr. R. is a first class shoemaker and when in Bellefonte was with Graham & Son.

Mrs. Laura Retter and Mrs. Carrie Caldwell, of Altoona, are the ladies who have been enlivening the residence of Mr. John Wilson, of Half Moon, with their presence. But they departed last Wednesday and now it will seem lonesome for a while.

Mr. George Miller killed a large garter snake the other day. That didn't surprise him much as he has often killed snakes. But he was electrified beyond expression to find that the large snake contained 74 small ones, or 75 snakes in all.

Mr. James Passmore, a prominent Philipsburg hotelist, shook hands with his Bellefonte friends a few days ago. He is such a pleasant gentleman that we are induced to express the hope that hereafter he may be able to pass more people into his pleasant hotel than ever before.

Messrs. John and Joseph Grant, of Norristown, arrived in Bellefonte last week to join the force of employes at the glass works. They bear the same name that was made so illustrious during the recent civil war, but claim no kinship with U. S. Grant, and they think it well that this fact should be understood so that if either of them runs for President people will not hesitate to vote for him because they object to sending the same family to the White House for three terms.

Judge Gibson Larimer is steadily improving in health.

Mr. R. I. Cromley, of Lock Haven, is visiting relatives in Aaronsburg.

John I. Rankin registered at the Park Hotel, Williamsport, on Thursday.

Mr. James Wolfenden, of Lock Haven, has been in rather feeble health of late.

Mr. Scott Lose is the most recent acquisition of the Adelphic Orchestra. He plays the trombone.

Rev. Prof. Wolf's new dwelling house at Spring Mills is almost completed and is very beautiful.

Miss Lydie Harris, daughter of Mr. Henry Harris, has returned after quite an extended visit in Canton, Ohio.

Miss Julia L. Reed, of Connecticut, arrived Friday evening to resume her duties as a teacher in the Bellefonte Academy.

Mr. J. L. Roush, of Madisonburg, will attend Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster during the coming College year.

Mrs. James A. Beaver and Mrs. Abram Valentine returned on Friday afternoon from Asbury Park where they have spent several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob V. Thomas are sojourning in the Catskills, New York's popular mountain resort. Miss Lide Thomas is also with them.

Mrs. John Harper entertained several guests at tea on Thursday evening. To say that Mr. Alex. Whiteman was present testifies sufficiently to the fun and enjoyment.

Miss Nellie Larimer, who has been enlivening Bellefonte with her presence during the summer, started last Fridya for Omaha, Neb., where she will enter St. Mary's Convent school.

Ex-Editor J. R. VanOrmer spent Sunday, August 26, in Bellefonte. He says that he is much pleased with the Quaker City and its inhabitants. He departed on the first train Monday morning.

Miss Sallie Smith, of Howard, a sister of Mr. Valentine Smith of Valentines Store Company, "Limited," visited Bellefonte on Friday. She is one of the brightest and most agreeable young ladies in the county, and has just returned from attendance on the summer session of the Millersville Normal School, where she has prepared herself more thoroughly than ever before to pursue her chosen vocation of teaching. Her presence in Bellefonte is highly appreciated.

Wescott—Hull.

On Thursday evening at 9 o'clock the residence of Mr. Robert Larimer on High street was the scene of a wedding, the contracting parties being Mr. Frank Wescott, one of the popular and handsome employes of the Bellefonte glass works, and Miss Ross Hull, an estimable young lady of this place. Rev. George Penepacker, of the M. E. church, officiated, pronouncing the words which consummated their new and very dear relation of husband and wife. Mr. Wescott is well calculated to make the very best young lady a model husband. His fair bride is a modest and most worthy lady of whom none speak but to praise. We understand that they will locate in Bellefonte. We extend to them our sincerest congratulations, and trust that life's ocean may present a calm and unruffled surface to them; that sunlight may be constantly reflected from its mirror-like bosom, and that they may be fanned by the prosperous winds of perfect happiness which bring no trace of sorrow with them, and propell the barque in which they glide to a safe haven.

—Two artificial rabbits have been placed in the grounds surrounding Mr. Fearon Mann's residence. They look so natural as to deceive the very elect, and now that the hunting season has opened it is feared that some gunner will begin to pop lead at them.

—Mr. Rudolph Munhollan, an aged resident of near Snow Shoe, departed this life on Monday, August 27. He was one of the most aged citizens of this county, being about 84 years old. He was the proprietor of a hotel which is known by all who travel in the direction of Snow Shoe. He was also quite wealthy and owned immense tracts of valuable timber lands. All of his life has been spent in this county and in the capacity of a landlord he had met and conversed with so many citizens that he perhaps knew more about Centre county than any other resident. It was a great pleasure to converse with him. He leaves a wife and four children who have all arrived at the age of maturity. The funeral occurred on Tuesday, August 28.

MARRIED.

SHEARER—STOVER.—On the 19th of August, at the Lutheran parsonage, at Aaronsburg, by Rev. John Tomlinson, Mr. Foster M. Shearer, of near Zion, and Miss Superia Stover, of Centre Hall.
